

While scooters can be a problem they are usually used by seniors or disabled people who are normally careful drivers. The item in 'The Age' Sunday 10 Dec.2017 in Techknow informs us " the Movpak backpack has a flip-out electric skateboard that travels at up to 24km/h in production & available for pre-order."

This will be used by young people who will enjoy speed and thus become a danger to old people, pedestrians etc as the footpaths will be the place they can travel on.

Has there been any consideration to the problems & dangers this skateboard will be.?

Being elderly this concerns me and my friends.

Regards,

Yvonne Sartori