

PARLIAMENT OF AUSTRALIA

Reports of the Joint Standing Committee on Treaties

Introduction

The Joint Standing Committee on Treaties was established in 1996 to provide a greater formal role for the Parliament in overseeing treaties and treaty-making.¹ Its role is to review and report on all treaty actions proposed by the Government before action which binds Australia to the terms of the treaty is taken.²

The Committee's Resolution of Appointment, made at the start of each Parliament, is largely unchanged since first agreed in 1996, and empowers the Committee to inquire into and report upon:

- matters arising from treaties and related National Interest Analyses and proposed treaty actions and related Explanatory Statements presented or deemed to be presented to the Parliament;
- any question relating to a treaty or other international instrument, whether or not negotiated to completion, referred to the Committee by:
 - either House of the Parliament, or
 - a Minister; and
- such other matters as may be referred to the Committee by the Minister for Foreign Affairs and on such conditions as the Minister may prescribe.³

Treaty categorisation

By convention, treaties considered by the Committee are categorised as Category One, Category Two or Category Three treaty actions.

Category One treaties, known as major treaty actions, are generally treaties that:

- are expected to have some regulatory or economic impact; or
- are expected to establish a new policy framework in relation to a particular issue; or
- will benefit from extensive public consultation prior to ratification.

The Committee will typically table its report into a Category One treaty in twenty joint sitting days (that is, days when both Houses of Parliament sit).

Category Two treaties, also known as major treaty actions, are for the most part uncontroversial in nature and relatively routine in form (often based on a standard 'template' agreement). The Committee will typically table its report into a Category Two treaty in fifteen joint sitting days.

Category Three treaties, or minor treaty actions, do not impact significantly on the national interest and would be likely to have negligible financial or legal effect within Australia. Minor treaty actions are usually insignificant amendments to treaties to which Australia is already a party.

Category Three treaties are not tabled in the Parliament, but they are referred to the Committee, together with a short Explanatory Statement that describes the practical and legal effect of the particular treaty action in question and why it is considered likely to have negligible impact. The Committee does not usually conduct a public inquiry into minor treaty actions, but considers such treaties at its private meetings and its decisions are published in its reports.⁴

Explanatory note

Prior to 2022, minor treaty actions considered by the Committee were not consistently identified as such in this document, or consistently listed in this document. Minor treaty actions were comprehensively listed in a separate document that can be found on the Committee's website.⁵ From the 47th Parliament (2022), all treaties considered by the Committee are included in this document.
