Annual report 2014

Introduction

The Committee of Senators' Interests, established under standing order 22A, is required to report on its operations annually. This is the 20th annual report of the committee. As part of its report, the committee provides background information on the registration of interests and the role of the committee.

Registration of interests and the role of the committee

On 17 March 1994 the Senate adopted the Senators' Interests resolutions. The resolutions act as a safeguard against conflicts of interest, and the perception of such conflicts, by requiring senators to lodge statements of registrable interests to enhance transparency in relation to the exercise of their public duties.

Registrable interests range from assets and liabilities, interests in trusts and partnerships, directorships, gifts, sponsored travel and hospitality, and certain relationships with organisations (as an officeholder or financial contributor over a threshold amount).¹ Senators may also choose to declare things that would not, on their face, appear to engage any of the listed registrable interests.² This is a matter for the judgement of individual senators.

From its inception, the committee has stressed that it is the responsibility of individual senators to interpret the resolutions and to determine which of their interests fall within its terms, rather than relying on external advice about what 'should' or 'should not' be declared. This reflects the unique status of members of Parliament as elected officers, responsible primarily to the electors and to the House to which they have been elected.

The committee has developed explanatory notes to guide senators in meeting the requirements of the regime. It is to the resolutions, forms and notes, and to any other commentary by the committee, that senators should turn for assistance in determining how the disclosure regime applies to their own particular circumstances. Any senator may request from the committee clarification of any aspect or raise any matter relating to the form and content of the register. The committee may respond to such requests by providing individual guidance, by amending the explanatory notes or by proposing amendments to the Senators' Interests resolutions.

No senator sought the advice of the committee on such matters during 2014.

2 The final item on the list of registrable interests is "any other interests where a conflict with a senator's public duty could foreseeably arise or be seen to arise".

Requirements

A senator's statement of interests includes a public statement of their personal interests and a confidential statement of the interests, of which they are aware, of their spouses or partners and dependent children.

Each senator must provide such a statement within 28 days of making and subscribing an oath or affirmation of allegiance AND within 28 days after the first meeting of the Senate after 1 July first occurring after a general election. Senators must also notify any alteration in these interests within 35 days of the alteration occurring.

Statements of registrable interests must accord with the Senators Interests resolutions and must be in the form determined by the committee.

The statements of senators' interests are kept on a public register which is available for inspection by any person under conditions laid down by the committee. Since 2011 these statements have been available online on the committee's web pages, largely obviating the need to inspect the physical register.

Statements of the registrable interests of a senator's spouse or partner and of any dependent children remain confidential, except where the committee considers that a conflict of interest arises, at which time the committee may table the declaration. To date the committee has not had cause to consider taking this action.

The Senators' Interests forms, explanatory notes and other relevant documents are published on the committee's website and have been compiled into a handbook, available from the Registrar of Senators' Interests.

Online publication of statements of interests

Statements of senators' interests are published online on the committee's web pages, in accordance with the following procedures:

- Statements are published under each senator's name.
- Statements are scanned without any watermarking or redaction.
- Notifications of alterations are added to the relevant senator's published statement.
- Updates are published on a weekly basis.

As statements of senators' interests are available online, the committee no longer keeps record of those who access the hard copy register.

Maintenance of the register

The committee requires the Registrar of Senators' Interests to write to all senators to remind them of their obligations under the resolutions. This occurs on a routine basis, at least twice a year.

The current Senate met for the first time on 7 July 2014 and statements for all senators were published online at the end of the 28-day period referred to in the interests resolutions.

Only current statements (together with relevant alterations) are published online, however all statements and alterations continue to be compiled into volumes which are tabled in the Senate. In 2014 three such compilations were tabled:

On 14 July 2014, covering 11 December 2013 to 4 July 2014

On 4 September 2014, covering 1 July to 31 August 2014 (2 volumes)

On 17 December 2014, covering 5 July to 2 December 2014 (presented to the President)

Other matters

During the year the committee received no requests in relation to the form and content of the register of senators' interests, nor in relation to the register of official gifts which is also administered by the committee.

In August 2014, the Chair asked the secretariat to examine better ways of compiling and publishing interests statements. The committee will consider this further in 2015.
