My current spouse is an Australian citizen and was born in Australia, however, her maternal grandfather was born in China. Even if my partner had Chinese citizenship, China does not automatically confer Chinese nationality on foreign citizens who marry Chinese citizens, nor does China recognise dual nationality under Article III of its Nationality Law.

My former partner was a UK citizen. However, I have never resided in the UK or sought to acquire UK citizenship. Under British Nationality Law, British citizenship does not automatically transmit upon marriage.

While my Mother was born in the United States and is a US citizen, I did not acquire US citizenship at birth because my Mother did not satisfy the residency requirements. Advice from the US State Department website confirms that: 'For birth between December 24, 1952 and November 13, 1986, the U.S. citizen parent must have been physically present in the United States or one of its outlying possessions for 10 years prior to the person's birth, at least five of which were after the age of 14 for the person to acquire U.S. citizenship at birth.' My Mother permanently left the USA prior to her 10th birthday and therefore did not meet those requirements. I am only an Australian citizen.
