Michael Keenan MP, Minister for Human Services, in briefing media prior to an Australian Federal Police raid on the Victorian offices of the Australian Workers' Union on 24 October 2017. Notably, the senator's questions related to periods prior to Minister Keenan's appointment as the Minister for Human Services. Subsequent to receiving advice, the Chair stated that all questions relating to the operation of the Minister's office prior to his appointment as Minister for Human Services were out of order.

1.15 During the hearings, comments were made by some witnesses suggesting they were unable to provide answers to senators' questions as the response would include information that was provided as advice to government. The committee reiterates the following advice provided to witnesses in the Chair's opening statements:

[t]he Senate has resolved that there are no areas in connection with the expenditure of public funds where any person has discretion to withhold details or explanations from the parliament or its committees unless the parliament has expressly provided otherwise.⁹
