

Dear Sir or Madam:

I, [REDACTED], have got a letter from Queensland Nurse's Union about having difficulties with Australian Health Practitioner Regulation Agency (A.H.P.R.A.) and the Nursing and Midwifery Board of Australia (the N.M.B.A.).

I entered nursing school of Queensland University of Technology (Q.U.T.) in 2008. I chose this university as one of the most attract things was they could waive any English test and national board exam as it was a two year program. That's why I chose Q.U.T. over Curtin university or University of South Australia to be a physiotherapist. However, AHPRA and the N.M.B.A. changed the rule just two months before I graduated. In addition they also neglected our application even though they made a mistake. Anyway I could get a conditional registration with a help of Q.N.U but I am still studying English to meet the qualification they suddenly changed.

If I can be of further assistance in the process, please contact me. Thank you for your time and attention.

Sincerely yours,

20. April. 2011
