

Inquiry into the Australian Human Rights Commission Amendment (National Children's Commissioner) Bill 2012

The National Council
& of Single Mothers
Their Children Inc.

(www.ncsmc.org.au **)

ncsmc@ncsmc.com.au

WHO WE ARE

The National Council of Single Mothers and their Children Incorporated (NCSMC) is an organisation dedicated to single mothers. The council has become a platform whereby both community and government can communicate; it has lead the way in obtaining a range of beneficial outcomes; has actively sought to reduce systemic prejudice; continually challenges existing norms, and over many years has achieved improved opportunities and outcomes for single mothers and their children.

One of our greatest strengths is our expertise and commitment in working with and for the advancement of women and children due to poverty, violence, exclusion and gender inequality.

“We advocate for equality of opportunity, financial security and access to justice, legal and human rights”.

WE ENDORSE

The establishment of an Independent Statutory Body. It is our understanding that the National Children Commissioner would advocate at a national level for the needs, rights and views of people below the age of eighteen and we strongly support this role and purview.

We further support that the National Children's Commissioner to be situated in the Australian Human Rights Commission signaling a human rights agenda. This would direct the Commissioner's responsibility to ensure that the full range of human rights such as civil, cultural, legal, gender, economic, political and social are upheld.

Furthermore, the Bill needs to be considerate of the already established state-based Commissioners and Guardians for Children and Young People. It is important that there are not any unintended Federal-State consequences and roles and boundaries are defined. Clarity will support the collective capacity rather than duplication. NCSMC believes that a national voice could result in greater national constancy

We further endorse the following aspects

1. The promotion of the rights of children and young people
2. The monitoring and review of laws, policies and practices which impact on service provision for Children and Young People.
3. That the proposition and approach needs to be expansive and encompasses not only neglect and abuse, but the broader concepts of overall safety and wellbeing for children and young people.
4. A body to ensure that not only Australia upholds its responsibility as a signatory to the United Nations Convention on the Rights of the Child and all international obligations but promotes the adoption of this convention in its entirety.
5. Regardless of the citizenship or residency status for children and young people some of the key functions should include:
 - Providing national leadership in monitoring and advocating for the well being of Australian children and young people
 - Reviewing existing laws; proposing new policies; and conducting research

- Promoting and protecting the rights of children and young people in immigration detention, and acting as the legal guardian of unaccompanied minors who arrive in Australia without the requisite visa. We note that this would require transferring this responsibility from the Immigration Minister Commonwealth Commissioner for Children and Young People to the due to the a possible conflict of interest;
- Promoting strong education programs and standards to advance the wellbeing of our children and young people

6. A defined and major focus for Indigenous children and young people

CRITICAL ELEMENTS

VOICE OF THE CHILD IN THE CONTEXT OF FAMILY VIOLENCE

There is significant, consistent and contemporary evidence that presents the views and experience of children in the context of family violence and parenting arrangements is ignored, silenced and or trivialised. It is important that children and young people have their voice heard and that their safety, well-being and concerns are investigated and then elevated in the parenting arrangements. Research indicates that:

- Children wanted to have their voice heard. Children who were not happy with their share cared arrangement pointed to the difficulties of living unsupervised with the parent whose behaviour seemed unpredictable or violent, and a frustration that their concerns for their safety had not been listened to in the separation process¹.
- Furthermore, for many children and adolescents how happy they were with their arrangement was associated with their perception of their say.

¹ Family Violence and Family Law in Australia (The experience and views of Children and Adults from families who separated post-1995 and Post -2006), April 2010 p181, Bagshaw D; Wendt S; Campbell A; McInnes E; Tinning B; Batagol B; Sifris A; Tyson D; Baker J; Fernandez Aria P.

A progressive focus would be ensuring that the socio legal environment ensures that the child welfare, safety, wellbeing and rights have primacy in their deliberations, practices and outcomes.

Child Poverty

Adequacy of income support for children and young people should be central to the role. This need is essential given the absence of a national anti-poverty plan. Poverty in early childhood has been identified as the single most important contributing factor to adverse outcomes for children. Severe poverty in a household with young children translates to the following circumstances²:

- Inability to purchase nutritious food. Developing children will have skipped meals, eat low nutrition cheap and unhealthy foods such as cordial, packet noodles and white bread, proudly counting as a skill that they have learned not to be hungry. ABS data (2007, p.75) identifies that 6% of one parent families with dependent children went without meals compared to 1% of couple families with children.
- Inability to purchase prescribed and pharmacy medicines. Children's illnesses and chronic health problems go untreated.
- Loss of utilities due to non-payment of bills and reconnection and debt collection fees means living without electric lighting, hot water, refrigeration, cooking facilities, temperature control and washing machine. This makes it difficult to prepare home-cooked meals, wear clean clothes, stay warm, and do homework at night. ABS data (2007, p. 75) notes that 34% of sole parent families with dependent children were Children proudly counting as a learned skill 'not to be hungry'.

² Australian Bureau of Statistics, (2007) General Social Survey Australia, Catalogue Number 4155.0, Canberra, AGPS.

- Unable to pay utilities bills on time, compared to 12% of couple families with dependent children. Inability to pay rent leads to loss of housing, couch-surfing, sharing house with other adults, sleeping in a car, sleeping in shelters.
- Children accompanying homeless parents are the largest group turned away from emergency housing according to SAAP data.
- Inability to participate in the community due to lack of private transport, poor public transport and the difficulty of using public transport with young children.

Children living in household where incomes are so low are at risk of poor health & education. Nutrition, care & health are all compromised.

Anglicare, Sydney 2012, State of Sydney Report.

The impact of poverty and its adverse outcomes, as detailed above, combine to inhibit children's optimum development and create an environment of chronic stress which in turn inhibits learning and social and emotional development³. This is manifesting in the rising number of young children being excluded or restricted from early childhood education and care services due to behavioural problems.

©NCSMC

www.ncsmc.org.au

ncsmc@ncsmc.org.au

³ Evans G. and Schamberg M 2008 Childhood poverty, chronic stress, and adult working memory