Complaint: The Northern Territory should receive a minimum of two permanent seats in the Lower and Upper Houses without being affected by population size.

How is a portion of Australia, with arguably the most diverse group of people, due to location and cultures, expected to be represented by 1 singular person, most likely from Darwin? It is extremely easy for people from down south to say that it's all the same but Central and Southern NT is extremely different to Northern NT and cannot expect to have the same necessities.

Outcome: Preferable reinstatement of the second LH seat for the NT, with hopefully the addition of a third so that the Territory could be split into North, Central and South. Furthermore, make them permanent seats.
