G'day,

I have to admit that I know very little about what we produce as nuclear waste. But that's of little consequence. What is important is that nuclear waste should not be moved over long distances around the country. If we produce waste then we have to store it. But it should be stored close to where people who know when it is getting dangerous can see it. Out of sight out of mind is not the way we should treat nuclear waste.

If on the other hand this dump is for the rest of the world to use then that is ludicrous. Anyone using nuclear energy should be responsible enough to look after it and not put it in someone else's back yard.
