Response to ICE Inquiry report and it's recommendations:

With no offence to the recommendations, most are not attacking the core points, many are not prevention measures.

Raw logic is required, direct action, by first understanding the raw basics below:

- drugs begin by an operator who organises the manufacture of the drugs with aims to make big tax evaded money
- manufacturers are then created, lately home based labs that are harder to detect and a bust will only be a small dent of one out of hundreds of small scale labs
- chemical suppliers are formed, including shonky doctors and pharmacy trade persons or imports by mail/cargo
- dealers are then recruited to do the sales for a small sling and free drugs

These are what recommendations should solely address, as the affects after the "above", are of little use to stop the above main factors such as:

- the drug buyer/user
- family upheaval from drug use
- crime and service uses

notably all single person issues, however, again basic logic needs to be applied to those 3 factors, discouragement, prevention, early education, and deterrents.

Helping families is not the way, such money is better spent on all the aforementioned primary paragraph.

What was ignored, was the huge cost in tax evasion of drug sales and its ways of redirecting huge money from economy spending into the drug empire, and, the main reason for cartel growth is the drug money they earn, allows them to expand and protect their drug entities better.

In the first submission, I submitted the best tool that can heavily impact the main elements in the first 4 bulleted elements, that being, heavy penalties with immunity from prosecution if they give up the next chain.

User dobs in dealer for immunity dealer dobs in supplier/manufacturer for immunity supplier/manufacturer gets big sentence reduction for supplying chemical supplier or immunity if they can supply the Mr Big the "operator of it all"

The mandatory penalties to be harsh enough that those caught would rather immunity and freedom instead of long prison, it then places mistrust within their organisations, moreso knowing the new dobbing scheme is very effective, they will likely move operations overseas.

Fixing these, automatically resolves the many recommendations that were made in submission round one.

We are left with imported ready-made drugs and chemicals to deal with, this is a customs issue whereby the tax evasions it saves will pay for a mass increase in customs screening, but within it, will catch other type drugs, illegal firearms and other illegal materials.

Aus post customs per an AFP terror suspect statement, saw a man get over 300 weapons past Aus Post customs the suspect alleged, indicating there might be some very suspect staff, another report on our shipping docks showed it is too easy to bring drugs in on ships into ports, these can be dealt with by borderforce department using more strategic plans, likewise much intelligence information can be gleaned from the aforementioned dob-in scheme.

We need to aim for checking every item that enters our shores, it wont take long to clean up the whole trade.

Prevention: this should start as a school lesson inclusive of footage of some of the crazy images of what ICE users do under addiction and how it has destroyed so many lives and families, it is more valid than teaching gay issues to school kids. Also TV adverts of some of the most crazy things and bad things Ice addicts do, whereby it is so crazy most people would say they would never want to become that stupid.

To help families maximally would be to implement all I have stated. but also useful to use for all type drugs, and you cant secure your borders without also securing customs entries.

The recommendations I read are all over the place, we need a targeted plan, direct action plan of attack with direct results, then it's benefits auto resolve all the secondary effects in most recommendations and more effectively.

For example it is useless educating for example emergency dept workers as they know more already, they see more than mental health workers, but they are only seeing the secondary damages to what I listed as the primary causes of damage, availability and sales.

It takes more than this inquiry, it takes realisations, logic, then people put together to formulate fixes to the primary causes, then work with governments to implement them nation-wide to avoid state government indifferences.

Unlike many so called experts, who have never seen or known the primary operators, I happen to know the bad elements from operators to dealers, to chemical strategies, thus the actual creators. Stop the creators you stop the chain.

You will not stop drugs at the user or family level, and most recommendations were attempting that.
