

Australia still has unspoiled natural regions that are essential to the health of the planet and all living things on it.

These regions are of national and global significance and must be protected by the Commonwealth. We have signed up to international World Heritage and species protection protocols and only the Australian government can ensure we abide by these.

State governments cannot be trusted to protect these treasures of nature.