1. What services is Cox Inall Change Pty Ltd performing under the contract?

3. Who will receive the outputs? Will the outputs be shared beyond the Department of Health?
4. Will the contract inform public information campaigns? If so, please nominate the campaigns.

Answer:

What services is Cox Inall Change Pty Ltd performing under the contract?

The Department of Health engaged Cox Inall Change (CIC), under the Department of Finance Government Communications Campaign Panel arrangements, to deliver, in collaboration with the Department, a comprehensive program of public relations to support the Australian Government's National COVID-19 Vaccines Campaign.

The public relations approach supports and extends the National Advertising campaign. It provides timely, accurate information tailored to the public, priority groups and stakeholders. The focus is promoting the benefits of vaccinations with a broad-cross section of the Australian community, to normalise vaccination and address hesitancy. Activities include pop-up information kiosks in shopping centres, community events and sporting matches. These kiosks include translators where there are significant portions of the community who speak languages other than English. Other activities include engagement with the business community and sporting clubs and codes to create and share content on vaccination and a program of vox pops and case studies to demonstrate the number of people coming forward for vaccination across the country.

Why couldn't the work be performed by the Department? What skills or capability does the Department lack?

The Department does not lack the skills or the capability to undertake this work program. The Department of Health's Public Information Branch is utilising its internal skills and capability to deliver this major public relations strategy. However, this is a significant program of work. Therefore, they are drawing on the additional capacity of CIC to this internal capability.

Who will receive the outputs? Will the outputs be shared beyond the Department of Health?

The communication outputs from this work are for all Australians.

They are shared publicly across the Department of Health's channels and via a broad range of third parties including health and community sector groups, business, sporting organisations and the not for profit sectors for distribution via newsletters, alerts, social media, information kits, roundtables and working groups. The community also benefit from the on the ground engagement that is an integral part of the strategy.

Will the contract inform public information campaigns? If so, please nominate the campaigns.

The work undertaken by CIC supports the National COVID-19 Vaccine campaign. It is underpinned by research and focuses on targeted activities.
