

Dear sir,

I was a donor at the Fertility Clinic run by the Royal Hospital for Women in Paddington. I volunteered at the clinic from 1978 to 1982 and I think it's important to establish a register, on a voluntary basis, of donors, to enable their children to contact them in future years, if they wish when they turn 18 years of age. I fathered a number of children and over the years, some of them were able to trace me, with the help of the Royal Hospital as I'd signed a document saying I was happy to meet the children if that was their wish.

If I can be of any help, I would be happy to assist.

yours faithfully
