Section 1. Introduction

Overview

- 1.1 The Department of Education, Employment and Workplace Relations welcomes the opportunity to make a written submission to the Senate Committee Inquiry into the Building and Construction Industry Improvement Amendment (Transition to Fair Work) Bill 2009 (the Bill).
- 1.2 The Bill was introduced into the House of Representatives on 17 June 2009. It gives effect to the Forward with Fairness – Policy Implementation Plan policy commitments the Government took to the last election and represents the Government's response to the report by the Hon Murray Wilcox QC, Transition to Fair Work Australia for the Building and Construction Industry (the Wilcox Report).
- 1.3 The provisions in the Bill are designed to create a strong and fair set of compliance arrangements for the building and construction industry to commence from 1 February 2010. The Bill provides for:
 - the creation of a new agency, the Office of the Fair Work Building Industry Inspectorate (the Building Inspectorate) to regulate the building and construction industry; [refer Section 3 of this submission] to replace the Office of the Australian Building and Construction Commissioner (ABCC) which is to be abolished;
 - a capacity for the Director of the Building Inspectorate (the Director) to compulsorily obtain information (including through requiring a person to attend an examination and answer questions) or documents from a person whom the Director believes has information or documents relevant to an investigation; [refer Section 5 of this submission];
 - a number of safeguards in relation to the use of the power to compulsorily obtain information or documents, including all the safeguards recommended in the Wilcox Report [refer Section 5 of this submission];
 - creation of an office, the Independent Assessor, who, on application from stakeholders, may make a determination that the examination notice powers will not apply to a particular project; [refer Section 6 of this submission];
 - building industry participants to otherwise be subject to the same workplace relations framework that applies to other employers and employees, including in respect of penalties and industrial action;
 - the creation of the Fair Work Building Industry Inspectorate Advisory Board (the Advisory Board) whose role will be to make recommendations to the Director about the policies, priorities and programs of the Building Inspectorate [refer Section 7 of this submission]; and
 - retention of the provisions that establish the Office of the Federal Safety Commissioner and its related OHS Accreditation Scheme [refer Section 8 of this submission].
- 1.4 In addition, the key components of the new system will be supported by transitional arrangements which are dealt with in Section 9 of this submission.

Importance of Building and Construction Industry

- 1.5 The building and construction industry is a critical sector of the Australian economy with immediate and direct impacts on jobs, growth and productivity. The Australian Bureau of Statistics estimated the total value of construction work in 2007-08 to be $82 billion¹ and that the industry employs 980,000 people². The industry's importance is further demonstrated by the scale and scope of construction funding the Australian Government has committed through the Nation Building and Jobs Plan which will result in 35,000 construction sites around the country, building the infrastructure needed for tomorrow and supporting jobs today. This construction activity is the direct result of the Government's $29.9 billion investment in schools, housing, energy efficiency, community infrastructure, roads and support to small businesses.
- 1.6 As the Australian Government's 2009 Budget set out, a central feature of the economic recovery plans is the Nation Building for the Future package, which builds on earlier economic stimulus plans and delivers:
- $8.4 billion in new road, rail and ports infrastructure;
 - $4.7 billion for the National Broadband Network;
 - $3.1 billion for new hospitals and medical facilities;
 - $2.6 billion for education infrastructure; and
 - $3.5 billion for clean energy developments.
- 1.7 This equals a total additional spend of over $22 billion to see the nation through the current global recession to a stronger future by boosting long term productive capacity through investing in skills, education and human capital.
- 1.8 Australia's capacity to deliver on these nation building initiatives is dependent on having a safe, productive and harmonious construction industry.

Purpose of the submission

- 1.9 In this submission, the Department will focus on a number of key aspects of the Bill and set out the policy underpinning those aspects.
- 1.10 In doing so, the submission will also respond to a number of issues that have been raised by various stakeholders since the Bill was introduced.

Section 2. Consultation preceding the Bill

Introduction

- 2.1 The Government made a pre-election commitment, as outlined in its Forward with Fairness Policy Implementation Plan, to consult widely with industry stakeholders on the transition to new regulatory arrangements for the industry. On 22 May 2008, the Government announced an extensive consultation process, to be undertaken by the Hon Murray Wilcox QC, a retired Federal Court judge, on the transition to Fair Work Australia for the building and construction industry.
- 2.2 Mr Wilcox' consultations were separate to the consultative processes established by the Government to inform the broader workplace relations framework and the establishment of Fair Work Australia.
- 2.3 Mr Wilcox conducted his consultation process over the period June 2008 to March 2009 and provided his report, Transition to Fair Work Australia for the Building and Construction Industry (the Wilcox Report), to the Minister for Employment and Workplace Relations, the Hon Julia Gillard MP, on 31 March 2009.
- 2.4 The Wilcox Report was based on extensive consultation with industry stakeholders including:
- 22 formal comments on the proposed Terms of Reference;
 - consultation with 45 stakeholder groups including face to face meetings, a site visit and telephone consultations;
 - receipt of 48 written submissions in response to the release for public comment of a discussion paper on 9 October 2008; and
 - three public debates on key issues at law schools in Sydney, Melbourne, and Perth.
- 2.5 Mr Wilcox reported on the diametrically opposed positions held by stakeholders both in support of and in objection to the ABCC and BCII Act, noting that:
- Opinion on some issues is polarised. There were times when I wondered whether my discussants appreciated even the existence of a contrary view, still more its arguable merit and the passion of its adherents.*³
- 2.6 The Wilcox Report contains eight recommendations which address Mr Wilcox' terms of reference. The full recommendations of the Wilcox Report are provided at Attachment A.

³ The Hon. Murray Wilcox QC, Transition to Fair Work Australia for the Building and Construction Industry (2009), paragraph 2.8.

Subsequent Consultations

- 2.7 The Government undertook further consultation with key industry stakeholders, following the release of the Wilcox Report, including State and Territory Workplace Relations Ministers, employer and employee associations, individual employers and subcontractor associations. These consultations were to inform the Government's response to the Wilcox Report recommendations.
- 2.8 In addition to this, the Government has also held two meetings of the Committee on Industrial Legislation (CoIL). The first related to the Bill, while the second explored a number of possible regulations. It is proposed further meetings of CoIL will be held following the Senate inquiry to consider regulations before they are made.

Section 3. Fair Work Building Industry Inspectorate

Introduction

- 3.1 The Government made a commitment prior to the last election to maintain the existing arrangements for the building and construction industry, including the ABCC until 31 January 2010, at which time it would replace the ABCC with a specialist building and construction industry inspectorate.
- 3.2 While the election commitment had stated the Building Inspectorate was envisaged to be within Fair Work Australia, industry feedback has strongly supported the specialist body remaining an autonomous body independent of the Fair Work Ombudsman. The Government has accepted the industry views. This model also gives best effect to the Wilcox Report's recommendations that the Director have 'operational autonomy' a clearly identified funding allocation and dedicated operational staff.

Overview

- 3.3 The Government's Forward with Fairness – Policy Implementation Plan promised that there would “not be a single moment where the construction industry is without a strong ‘cop on the beat’”. The Government has consistently made it clear that it will not tolerate intimidation or violence by any party in the industry, or any conduct which breaks the law.
- 3.4 The Bill reflects the Government's commitment to implement a strong and balanced set of compliance arrangements for all industry participants and honours the Government's pre-election commitment to abolish the ABCC.
- 3.5 The Bill provides for an autonomous specialist inspectorate, focussed on ensuring the building and construction industry's compliance with workplace relations obligations. Like the ABCC, the Building Inspectorate will:
- be headed by an independent statutory office holder (the Director);
 - have a separate budget; and
 - be subject to legislative direction from the Minister, however, directions may not relate to individual cases.
- 3.6 The Building Inspectorate will ensure compliance with workplace relations laws by all building industry participants. It will actively pursue the unlawful or inappropriate conduct of all building industry participants including, importantly, the underpayment of employee entitlements such as wages.

Role of Inspectorate and the Definition of Building Work

- 3.7 The Wilcox Report noted that a major criticism of the BCII Act was the broad definition of building work. In its current form the BCII Act defines building work to include the pre-fabrication of made-to-order components to form part of any building, structure or works, “whether carried out on-site or off-site”. The Wilcox Report recommended that the Building Inspectorate's jurisdiction and powers should not extend off-site (Recommendation 6(ii)).

- 3.8 Based on this Recommendation the Bill deletes the reference to ‘off-site’ prefabrication works in the proposed definition of building work (refer item 48 of Schedule 1 of the Bill). The Explanatory Memorandum clarifies that “auxiliary or holding sites separate from the primary construction site(s) will remain covered by the definition of building work”.⁴

Director

- 3.9 The Building Inspectorate will be headed by a statutorily independent Director appointed by the Minister. The Director will manage the operations of the Building Inspectorate and will monitor and promote appropriate standards of conduct by building industry participants.
- 3.10 The Director will not be subject to oversight or control by other statutory office holders. This model gives best effect to the Wilcox Report’s recommendation that the Director have operational autonomy and reflects stakeholder consultations on this point.
- 3.11 The Director’s functions will include providing education, assistance and advice to building industry participants in order to promote a harmonious and productive industry and compliance with the law. The Director will also monitor and investigate suspected contraventions of Commonwealth workplace relations legislation and industrial instruments and commence or intervene in, proceedings in accordance with the proposed legislation (proposed section 10).

Inspectors

- 3.12 The Bill provides that the Director will also be a Fair Work Building Industry Inspector (Inspector) (proposed section 59A) and may appoint Inspectors (proposed section 59).
- 3.13 The Director may appoint persons of good character as Inspectors for a period not exceeding four years (proposed section 59).

Director’s and Inspector’s powers

- 3.14 The Building Inspectorate will have the powers in the building and construction industry which the Fair Work Ombudsman has in other industries.
- 3.15 Inspectors will have all the powers in the building and construction industry that Fair Work Inspectors have in other industries (proposed subsections 59C(1), (2) and (3)).
- 3.16 The Bill provides that any reference in an Act to the Fair Work Inspector has effect as if it were a reference to an Inspector (proposed subsection 59C(4)(a)).
- 3.17 In addition, Inspectors will have powers in relation to enforcement of a Building Code (should one be issued).
- 3.18 The policy intention is that Inspectors will encourage cooperative and voluntary compliance, particularly through educative activities. However, the Building Inspectorate will be able to take more formal steps to enforce the law, for example by court proceedings or by using mechanisms such as entering into enforceable undertakings or exercising the compulsory examination powers discussed in Section 5 of this submission.

3.19 In addition, the Director will have powers in relation to:

- the conduct of compulsory examinations (see Section 5 of this submission for a detailed discussion on these powers and the associated safeguards); and
- the capacity to intervene in court proceedings which relate to building industry participants.

Disclosure provisions

3.20 In response to numerous stakeholder concerns the Bill specifically provides that the Director must not require a person attending a compulsory examination not to disclose information or answers given at the examination, or not to discuss matters relating to the examination with any other person (refer proposed subsection 51(6)).

Enforcement of Building Code

- 3.21 The Bill retains the capacity currently provided in the existing BCII Act for the Minister to issue a Building Code. The Government has not issued a Building Code under the BCII Act, but this will remain an option for the Government following passage of the Bill.
- 3.22 If a Building Code is issued under the proposed legislation Inspectors will have the power to monitor compliance with the Building Code and will have the same functions and powers that they would have if the Building Code were a Fair Work instrument (proposed section 59E).

Conclusion

- 3.23 The establishment of the Building Inspectorate honours the Government's election commitment to transfer the ABCC's responsibilities to a specialist inspectorate for the building and construction industry from 1 February 2010.
- 3.24 The requirement that the Building Inspectorate monitor compliance activities of unions, employers and employees alike provides for a balanced compliance regime. The Government is confident that the Building Inspectorate will assist in creating the sort of long term change Australia's building and construction industry needs if it is to be efficient, create jobs and make a positive contribution to national productivity.

Section 4. Compliance and Penalties

Introduction

- 4.1 The Bill reflects the Government's acceptance of the Wilcox Report recommendations that:
- (a) the provisions and penalties for contraventions of the Fair Work Act 2009 (the Fair Work Act) governing the conduct of employers, employees and industrial associations of the Fair Work Act apply, unchanged, to participants in the building and construction industry⁵ (Recommendation 2); and
 - (b) the existing compulsory examination powers, currently available under section 52 of the BCII Act, be retained for the new Building Inspectorate subject to new safeguards for their use (Recommendations 3, 4 and 5).
- 4.2 The Wilcox Report justifies this approach, as follows:
- The history of the building and construction industry may provide a case for the retention of special investigative measures, to increase the chance of a contravener in that industry being brought to justice. However, I do not see how it can justify that contravener then being subjected to a maximum penalty greater than would be faced by a person in another industry, who contravened the same provision and happened to be brought to justice. To do that would be to depart from the principle ... of equality before the law. It is not inconsistent with that principle for a court, in determining the penalty to be imposed in the particular case, to take into account the facts of that case, including the circumstances surrounding the contravention and the prior record of the contravener; but it is inconsistent with the principle to use a yardstick that varies according to the identity of the contravener's industry.*⁶
- 4.3 Detailed discussion of the retention of compulsory examination powers is addressed in Section 5 of this submission.

Removal of Industry specific penalties

- 4.4 In response to the Wilcox Report, the Government has adopted Recommendation 2. The Bill brings general compliance and penalties in the building and construction industry into line with those under the Fair Work Act.
- 4.5 Some stakeholders have expressed the need to maintain penalty levels applicable to the building and construction industry which exceed those more generally available due to the potential cost of industrial action in the industry. The Wilcox Report explicitly addresses this concern:

⁵ The Hon. Murray Wilcox QC, Transition to Fair Work Australia for the Building and Construction Industry (2009), page 30.

⁶ The Hon. Murray Wilcox QC, Transition to Fair Work Australia for the Building and Construction Industry (2009), paragraph 4.63.

*... it is necessary to remember there are many other industries in which industrial action may cause great loss to an employer, and even the national economy, and/or considerable public inconvenience. One has only to think of our major export industries, most components of the transport industry, the gas and electricity industries, the telecommunication industry and emergency services such as police, ambulances and hospitals.*⁷

- 4.6 Consistent with Mr Wilcox' recommendations, the Building Inspectorate will be charged with enforcing the building industry's compliance with the general law as prescribed in the Fair Work Act. The provision of higher financial penalties for industrial action and the broader definitions of industrial action in the building industry have been removed by the Bill (item 51 of Schedule 1). The general industrial action provisions in the Fair Work Act are clear, tough and provide workable options for employers and employees to respond to industrial action. The provisions ensure that industrial action is only protected when taken during genuine bargaining and subject to strict requirements.

Impact on lawlessness

- 4.7 Some stakeholders and commentators have sought to portray the proposed decrease in maximum penalty levels as making the Building Inspectorate a 'toothless tiger' and decrease the associated deterrent effect against unlawful behaviour. The Government does not agree with this suggestion for the following reasons.
- 4.8 Firstly, a key element of the deterrent effect of the ABCC (or any specialist inspectorate) is their existence and capacity to quickly respond to stakeholder concerns. In his Report, Mr Wilcox stated:

*One of the most impressive aspects of the ABCC's work, as recounted to me by several people in management positions (head contractors and subcontractors), is the speed with which the ABCC responds to requests for assistance. Apparently, it is not unusual for the ABCC to have somebody on a building site within an hour of receiving a telephone call. I was told that, once the ABCC inspector explains the parties' legal positions, the dispute often resolves itself.*⁸

Nothing in the Bill inhibits the capacity of the Building inspectorate to respond quickly to stakeholder concerns.

- 4.9 Secondly, an analysis of the ABCC's litigation history shows that more than half of the court cases in which the ABCC successfully obtained penalties were brought under the Workplace Relations Act 1996 (WR Act) alone. The maximum penalty rates available under the BCII Act were irrelevant to these cases; as they will be for future cases brought under the Fair Work Act.

⁷ The Hon. Murray Wilcox QC, Transition to Fair Work Australia for the Building and Construction Industry (2009), paragraph 4.52.

⁸ The Hon. Murray Wilcox QC, Transition to Fair Work Australia for the Building and Construction Industry (2009), paragraph 3.24.

- 4.10 Thirdly, where parties consistently refuse to comply with the industrial law, the courts retain the ability to impose strong penalties for non-compliance with any court orders and penalties, under the general contempt jurisdiction. This was recently illustrated by the awarding of a $75 000 penalty for contempt of court (under the Federal Court of Australia Act 1976) and the awarding of legal costs on an indemnity basis against the CFMEU by the Federal Court in Bovis Lend Lease Pty Ltd v CFMEU.⁹ This Federal Court decision reflects the serious view that the courts take in relation to conduct that is viewed as being in contempt of court.
- 4.11 Given these factors, it is the Government's view that the Building Inspectorate with the associated powers and penalties made available in the Bill will continue to represent a significant deterrent to those who may be considering unlawful behaviour.

Application of other laws

- 4.12 The Government has consistently stated that it will not tolerate illegal conduct in the building and construction industry. In addition to the scope of regulation available under the Fair Work Act for conduct related to unlawful industrial action or improper use of right of entry provisions, the criminal law will continue to apply to criminal behaviour which will be a matter for the police.
- 4.13 In addition, the Trade Practices Act 1974 will operate as well as a number of other laws and common law remedies in tort.
- 4.14 Other Commonwealth and State and Territory legislation applicable to all industries across all sectors of the Australian economy will continue to apply after the passage of the Bill. This includes relevant Federal and State and Territory occupational health and safety legislation and issues arising under legislation such as the Privacy Act 1988 and Independent Contractors Act 2006. Where, in the course of performing their duties, an inspector of the Building Inspectorate identifies issues under other legislation, they will be able to refer matters to the appropriate bodies.

Conclusion

- 4.15 The Government believes the Bill appropriately balances the need to ensure the positive lasting cultural changes in the industry continue, the requirement for a strong cop on the beat and fairness.

Section 5. Compulsory Examination – Powers and Safeguards

Introduction

- 5.1 Mr Wilcox recommended that the existing compulsory examination powers, currently available under section 52 of the BCII Act, be retained for the new Building Inspectorate subject to new safeguards for their use.
- 5.2 The Government agrees with Mr Wilcox' conclusions on these powers and the Bill maintains the availability of the powers for the Building Inspectorate. Very importantly the Bill also implements all of Mr Wilcox' recommended safeguards.

Ongoing Need

- 5.3 Mr Wilcox came to the following pivotal conclusions about the ongoing need for compulsory examination powers:

I am satisfied there is still such a level of industrial unlawfulness in the building and construction industry, especially in Victoria and Western Australia, that it would be inadvisable not to empower the [Specialist Division] to undertake compulsory interrogation. The reality is that, without such a power, some types of contravention would be almost impossible to prove.¹⁰, and

I have reached the opinion that it would be unwise not to endow [Specialist Division] (at least for now) with a coercive interrogation power. Although conduct in the industry has improved in recent years, I believe the job is not yet done.¹¹

- 5.4 The Government has agreed with the Wilcox Report recommendations. In her second reading speech to Parliament when introducing this Bill, the Deputy Prime Minister noted her disappointment that compulsory examination powers are still required:

There are those who will be critical of the Government's reforms; on both sides of the industry. We accept that differences in views and perspectives make this criticism almost inevitable and that some may be disappointed in some parts of this Bill. I am also disappointed; disappointed that there are still pockets of the industry where people think they are above the law, where people engage in intimidation and violence.

Having said that, the Government believes that the safeguards that are being introduced achieve the balance required to ensure compliance with the law and the fair treatment of individuals. Law abiding industry participants have nothing to fear from the existence of these strong powers to deal with rogue elements in the industry. Ultimately, whether or not the *powers are used is in the hands of all building industry participants... If the law is abided by then the powers will not be used.*¹²

Balanced approach

- 5.5 While recommending the retention of the compulsory examination power Mr Wilcox also recommended a number of new safeguards be implemented to protect against the inappropriate use of the power. These safeguards included processes before, during and after the use of the powers as outlined in recommendations 4 and 5 of the Wilcox Report.
- 5.6 Importantly Mr Wilcox did not suggest that these safeguards were required because of any misuse of these powers by the ABCC, as he says:
- “...the question is not whether the ABCC has satisfactorily handled its powers but what is the system that ought to be put into place, in new legislation, to govern the exercise of extraordinary powers by a new body.”*¹³
- 5.7 By accepting all of the safeguards recommended in the Wilcox Report, the Bill reflects the Government’s commitment to:
- ensure compulsory examination powers are used in a fair and balanced manner;
 - formalising a number of existing administrative arrangements by giving them the strength of law; and
 - both promoting cultural change in the industry and rewarding law abiding industry participants by providing for the capacity to ‘switch off’ the availability of compulsory examination powers on a project by project basis.

Approval of notice

- 5.8 Mr Wilcox’ recommendation 4(i) is that a notice to attend for compulsory examination can only be issued by a presidential member of the Administrative Appeals Tribunal (AAT). This recommendation is given effect by the Bill in proposed sections 44 to 47.
- 5.9 Clause 47 of the Bill requires the AAT presidential member to whom an application for an examination notice has been made to be satisfied of a number of legislative criteria outlined in proposed subsection 47(1), including any other matters prescribed by the regulations.
- 5.10 On 15 July 2009, in order to inform Senate inquiry submissions, the Department advised the Committee on Industrial Legislation (CoIL) members that subject to the outcomes of the Senate inquiry, it was the Government’s intention that the Regulations prescribe that the AAT presidential member also consider additional criteria relating to the nature and likely seriousness of the suspected contravention and the likely impact upon the person subject to the notice. The Government's view that these criteria could be considered was set out in paragraph 128 of the Bill's Explanatory Memorandum.

- 5.11 While the exact form of the regulations have not been settled, it is anticipated that the AAT presidential member would be required to have regard to these criteria rather than, for example, be satisfied that there is no impact on the person subject to the notice.
- 5.12 The decision of the AAT presidential member will be made ex parte (i.e. in the absence of the intended recipient) because as Mr Wilcox points out:
- '...the effect of such a decision is only to require the recipient to attend for interrogation. Particularly if my recommendations for greater supervision of the interrogation process are adopted, the occasional case in which the notice might not have been issued may seem a lesser evil than the prospect of frequent litigation about the justification for the notice.'*¹⁴
- 5.13 However, it remains open to the AAT member to seek additional information from the Director should the application be deficient or if he or she requires further information to make a decision (proposed subsection 45(6)).

Director or Deputy to preside over all examinations

- 5.14 Mr Wilcox' recommendation 4(ii) is that the Director or a Deputy Director of the Building Inspectorate is to preside at all compulsory examinations. This recommendation is given effect by the Bill in proposed subsection 51(2) in conjunction with proposed subsection 13(3).

Commonwealth Ombudsman to review and report

- 5.15 Mr Wilcox' recommendation 4(iii) is that the Commonwealth Ombudsman monitor all compulsory examinations by reviewing examination notices and a video recording and transcript of all compulsory examinations. This recommendation is given effect by the Bill in proposed subsections 54A(1) to 54A(5).
- 5.16 Mr Wilcox' recommendation 4(iv) is that the Commonwealth Ombudsman report to Parliament annually and otherwise as required, concerning the use of the compulsory examination power. This recommendation is given effect by the Bill in proposed subsections 54A(6) and 54A(7). The Commonwealth Ombudsman performed a similar oversight role in relation to the compulsory examination powers of the Building Industry Taskforce (the predecessor to the ABCC).

Payment of reasonable costs

- 5.17 Mr Wilcox' recommendation 5(i) is that people summoned for compulsory examination be reimbursed their reasonable expenses (travelling, accommodation and legal) and any loss of wages or other income. This recommendation is given effect by the Bill in proposed section 58, as are the mechanics of making such a claim.

Right to legal representation

- 5.18 The Bill enshrines the rights of persons subject to compulsory examination to be represented by a lawyer of their choice including during the examination. The reference to a lawyer of ‘the person’s choice’ is intended to make clear that there is no express or implied power on the part of the Director to refuse a person representation by a particular lawyer because that lawyer has represented or is also representing another person who has been examined. This subsection is intended to provide a individual with free choice. It is intended to address the decision in Bonan v Hadgkiss (Deputy Australian Building and Construction Commissioner) [2006] FCA 1334, which found that there is a discretionary power under the examination provisions in the existing Act to exclude a particular legal practitioner from appearing or acting at an examination.

Right to client legal privilege and public interest immunity

- 5.19 As the ABCC itself acknowledges, legal professional privilege is currently available as the privilege is not explicitly or impliedly abolished by the BCII Act.
- 5.20 To make it clear on the face of the legislation that legal professional privilege does apply, the Bill explicitly confirms the right to refuse to disclose information on the grounds of legal professional privilege, as well as public interest immunity, while noting that the defendant continues to bear the evidentiary burden in relation to these matters.
- 5.21 If claims of privilege and/or immunity cannot be agreed between the person subject to interview and the Director, they may be tested by the Commonwealth Director of Public Prosecutions and ultimately by the Courts.

Sunset Provision

- 5.22 While recommending that the compulsory examination power should be available to the Building Inspectorate Mr Wilcox accepted that this may not always be the case:
- ...it seems to me, that any tough new regulator in the building and construction industry will need a power of coercive interrogation; at least under present conditions.*
- However, the position may change. Even some of the employer associations concede it may not always be necessary for the regulator to have a coercive interrogation power. They suggest it may be desirable to review the situation in (say) five years and, for that purpose, impose a sunset clause on the relevant part of the new legislation. I think there is merit in this.*¹⁵

¹⁵ The Hon. Murray Wilcox QC, Transition to Fair Work Australia for the Building and Construction Industry (2009), paragraphs 5.109 – 5.110.

- 5.23 On this basis, and in addition to the recommended safeguards outlined above, Mr Wilcox also recommended that the compulsory examination power be subject to review and a five year sunset clause. Proposed section 46 provides that the Director cannot make an application for an examination notice under proposed section 45 after the end of five years after the section commences.
- 5.24 The Bill's Explanatory Memorandum states 'It is intended that, before the end of that period, the Government would undertake a review into whether the compulsory examination powers continue to be required'.¹⁶

Impact of safeguards on investigations

- 5.25 A number of stakeholders have criticised the imposition of these safeguards as 'fatally compromising investigations'. This view is not shared by the Government for the following reasons.
- 5.26 Firstly, the compulsory examination powers have never been intended as the primary or first process in the investigators processes. In fact they are rightly described as the method of last resort once all other options have been attempted and on this basis when used the investigation is usually well under way.
- 5.27 Secondly, the safeguards relate solely to the use of the compulsory examination powers and will therefore have no impact on the conduct of the majority of investigations conducted by the Building Inspectorate. According to the ABCC's Annual Report 2007-08, less than nine per cent of their investigations conducted during that year included the use of compulsory examination powers.
- (a) During 2007-08 the ABCC conducted 225 investigations into suspected contraventions of workplace laws and a further 388 reports were subject to preliminary investigation¹⁷; and
 - (b) during 2007-08 the ABCC conducted 54 examinations as a result of notices to attend compulsory examination.¹⁸
- 5.28 It is the Government's view that these safeguards do not impose an additional administrative impost on the use of the coercive powers. Nor in any way will they inhibit the capacity of the Building Inspectorate to speedily respond to matters. To the contrary, the processes provide safeguards to both parties involved in the use of these powers, by protecting:
- (a) the rights of persons required to attend an interview; and
 - (b) the Building Director from claims of inappropriate use of the powers.

Conclusion

- 5.29 The Government believes that the safeguards on the use of compulsory examination powers achieve the balance required to ensure compliance with the law and the fair treatment of individuals. Similarly, the arrangements balance the need for safeguards both before and after the use of these powers.
- 5.30 The proposed arrangements do not impose a significant number of new administrative ‘hurdles’; in most cases they formalise existing administrative processes.
- 5.31 Law abiding industry participants have nothing to fear from the existence of these powers. Ultimately, if the law is abided by, the powers will not be used.

Section 6. Independent Assessor

Introduction

- 6.1 In addition to the safeguards recommended by Mr Wilcox, the legislation is aimed at driving cultural change in the industry and focussing compliance activities where those activities are most needed.
- 6.2 On this basis the Bill creates an office, the Independent Assessor – Special Building Industry Powers (the Independent Assessor), who may, on application from an interested person, make a determination that the compulsory examination powers will not apply to one or more building projects (proposed section 39).

Determination Cannot Be Made in Relation to Existing Building Projects

- 6.3 In her Second Reading Speech the Hon Julia Gillard MP, Minister for Employment and Workplace Relations, advised the Parliament that the capacity to make application to the Independent Assessor would not apply to projects that commenced prior to 1 February 2010. This has been reflected in proposed section 38 which states:

This Subdivision [which relates to the Independent Assessor's ability to make determinations] applies in relation to a building project if the building work that the project consists of, or includes, begins on or after the commencement of this Subdivision. [emphasis added]

- 6.4 The impact of this provision with the definition of building work as defined in section 5 of the current BCII Act, means that an 'existing project' would be one which has had on-site activity commence prior to 1 February 2010.

Applications for a Determination by Independent Assessor

- 6.5 Subject to the passage of the Bill, in relation to projects that commence on or after 1 February 2010 an interested person may apply in writing to the Independent Assessor to make a Determination that the compulsory examination powers under the Act do not apply to a particular building project.
- 6.6 In making a Determination, the Independent Assessor must be satisfied in relation to that building project, that:
- (a) it would be appropriate to make the determination, having regard to:
 - (i) the object of this Act;
 - (ii) any matters prescribed by the regulations; and
 - (b) it would not be contrary to the public interest to make the determination (proposed section 39(3)).

- 6.7 Subject to the outcomes of the Senate inquiry, it is the Government's intention that the Regulations also prescribe that the Independent Assessor must be satisfied that:
- (a) the building industry participants in connection with the building project have a demonstrated record of compliance with workplace relations laws, including court or tribunal orders; and
 - (b) the views of other interested persons in relation to the project have been considered.
- 6.8 These criteria are consistent with:
- (a) the Object of the Act, which includes "ensuring compliance with workplace relations laws by all building industry participants";
 - (b) the Explanatory Memorandum which states, in part, "Matters prescribed by the regulations might include, for example, a demonstrated record of compliance with workplace relations laws, including court or tribunal orders, in connection with the building project"¹⁹; and
 - (c) administrative law principles which provide affected persons the opportunity to have their views considered.
- 6.9 If the Independent Assessor receives an application for a Determination the Independent Assessor must provide a copy of the application to the Director and give the Director an opportunity to make submissions in relation to the application (proposed subsection 41(1)). The Independent Assessor may also seek further information about the application from the applicant or Director.
- 6.10 The Bill does not prescribe the process the Independent Assessor must use to be satisfied that the views of other interested persons have been considered as this may vary from case to case. In the event an application does not adequately address the issue, the Independent Assessor may seek further information from the applicant, the Director and/or other 'interested persons' directly.

Definition 'Interested Persons'

- 6.11 The Bill provides that an 'interested person' may apply to the Independent Assessor to make a determination in relation to a building project. The Bill defines 'interested persons' to be the Minister for Employment and Workplace Relations and any other persons prescribed by Regulations (proposed subsection 36(2)).
- 6.12 Subject to the outcomes of the Senate inquiry, it is the Government's intention that the Regulations prescribe all 'building industry participants' (as defined by the existing Act) in relation to the project to which the application relates, to be 'interested persons'. This would mean all project employers, employees, their respective associations and the client(s) in relation to the project would be able to make an application to the Independent Assessor.

¹⁹ Explanatory Memorandum, Building and Construction Industry Improvement Amendment (Transition to Fair Work) Bill 2009, paragraph 92

Decision by Independent Assessor – notice, reapplication and reconsideration

- 6.13 As soon as practicable after making a decision in relation to an application for a Determination the Independent Assessor must notify the applicant and Director in writing (proposed subsection 41(5)).
- 6.14 If the Independent Assessor decides not to make a Determination the original applicant(s) cannot make another application in relation to the same building project unless new information becomes available (proposed subsection 40(5)).
- 6.15 If the Independent Assessor decides to make a Determination they must as soon as practicable give a copy of the Determination to the applicant and the Director, and arrange for it to be published in the Gazette (proposed subsection 42(1)).
- 6.16 In addition, the Director may request in writing the Independent Assessor to reconsider a Determination at any time after the original determination is made setting out the reasons for the request. In this case the Independent Assessor must:
- reconsider the Determination,
 - make a determination affirming, revoking or amending the original determination,
 - advise the Director and the original applicant of the new Determination and publish the new Determination in the Gazette (proposed section 43).
- 6.17 Some stakeholders have expressed concern about the apparent inability for an interested person to seek a review or revocation of a Determination by the Independent Assessor. Noting that the Independent Assessor must be satisfied that the views of interested persons have been considered before making a determination, it is also important to refer to the note under proposed section 39 which says:

Note 2: A determination can be varied or revoked on application by an interested person (see subsection 33(3) of the Acts Interpretation Act 1901) or on request by the Director (see section 43 of this Act).

Effect of a Determination by the Independent Assessor

- 6.18 Where the Independent Assessor has made a Determination in relation to a building project the Director can not apply to an AAT presidential member for an examination notice if the investigation is connected with that project while the Determination is in force (proposed subsection 45(2)).
- 6.19 A Determination by the Independent Assessor in no way affects any other compliance or investigation powers of the Building Inspectorate.
- 6.20 If the Independent Assessor decides to revoke a Determination, the compulsory examination powers would again be available in relation to the project. This would allow the compulsory examination powers to be used in relation to events which occurred during the period the Determination was in force.

Conclusion

- 6.21 In summary, subject to the passage of the Bill the following parameters will apply to the compulsory examination powers:
- From 1 February 2010 the increased safeguards on the use of compulsory examination powers will apply to all existing and new projects.
 - An application cannot be made to the Independent Assessor for a determination in relation to any building project that began before 1 February 2010. That is the compulsory examination power will always be available for these projects.
 - The default situation for all projects that begin on or after 1 February 2010 is that the compulsory examination powers will be available.
 - In relation to projects that begin on or after 1 February 2010 an interested person will be able to make an application to the Independent Assessor to make a determination that the compulsory examination powers will not apply.
 - If a Determination is made the Director (or interested person see paragraph 6.17 above) can apply for the Determination to be reconsidered or revoked.
 - If a Determination is revoked the compulsory examination powers would be able to be used in relation to events which occurred during the period the Determination was in force.
 - A Determination by the Independent Assessor in no way affects any other compliance or investigation powers of the Building Inspectorate.

Section 7. Advisory Board

Introduction

- 7.1 The Fair Work Building Industry Inspectorate Advisory Board is established in Part 2 of the Bill.
- 7.2 The Advisory Board expands and formalises the arrangements which underpin the ABCC's existing administratively based Industry Forum.
- 7.3 One of the Government's priorities for the industry is to continue the cultural reform that has been underway in recent years and an effective Advisory Board will be able to play an important role in this. Relevantly the Wilcox Report states:

My reason for favouring an advisory board is that I think it important that the [Building Inspectorate] do more than investigate and prosecute suspected contraventions of the relevant legislation and industrial instruments.

Many people have spoken to me about the need to change the culture within the building and construction industry. The best way of changing any culture is through education, so educational programs ought to be a major [Building Inspectorate] activity. Suitable programs are best devised with input from people steeped in the industry and conversant with its characteristics, Australia wide...²⁰

Role of Advisory Board

- 7.4 The role of the Advisory Board is to make recommendations to the Director about:
- (a) policies to guide the performance of the Director's functions and the exercise of the Director's powers;
 - (b) the priorities of, and the programs to be implemented by, the Director; and
 - (c) any matter that the Minister requests the Advisory Board to consider (proposed section 24).
- 7.5 The Bill does not obligate the Director to comply with the Advisory Board's recommendations.

Alternative to Wilcox Report 'Determinative' Advisory Board

- 7.6 The Wilcox Report recommended establishing an Advisory Board that would be responsible for determining the policies, programs and priorities of the Building Inspectorate but not exercise executive powers (emphasis added). The Bill however, provides that the Advisory Board will make recommendations to the Director rather than be a determinative body for the reasons outlined below.

²⁰ The Hon. Murray Wilcox QC, Transition to Fair Work Australia for the Building and Construction Industry (2009), paragraphs 8.14 and 8.15.

- 7.7 This departure from the Wilcox Report recommendation ensures the operational autonomy of the Building Inspectorate is not compromised through scenarios such as the ‘determinative’ Advisory Board being unable to reach agreement on the policies, programs and priorities of the Building Inspectorate.
- 7.8 However, the proposed model ensures representatives of the industry have a formal means of informing the policies, programs and priorities of the Building Inspectorate.

Advisory bodies for other Commonwealth Agencies

- 7.9 Advisory boards are quite common in the Commonwealth public sector, and provide very useful and relevant input, expertise and ‘coal face’ intelligence to public sector bodies.
- The Australian Competition and Consumer Commission (ACCC) has a number of Advisory Boards covering areas such as consultations with consumers, health sector consultation, financial literacy and the financial sector.
 - The Australian Securities and Investments Commission (ASIC) has a Business Advisory Board. It was created to provide strategic advice and feedback to ASIC, to ensure that businesses have direct input into changes that would affect them. The members of the Board are invited by ASIC and are from various relevant organisations and businesses.
 - The Australian Research Council (ARC) Advisory Council provides advice to the Chief Executive Officer (CEO) of the ARC on strategic issues, policy matters and matters relating to the evaluation of the research and research training. The Council is chaired by the ARC CEO and has six other members appointed for their distinguished research records or achievements in business research and development.

Advisory Board Members

- 7.10 Consistent with the Wilcox Report recommendation the Advisory Board will consist of the Director, the Fair Work Ombudsman (FWO) and five other members.
- 7.11 The Director and the FWO are members of the Advisory Board to ensure that they are appropriately informed about, and that there is no duplication between, the work of the Building Inspectorate and the Office of the Fair Work Ombudsman.
- 7.12 The members (other than the Director and the FWO) will be appointed by the Minister for a specified term not to exceed three years (proposed section 25). Members appointed by the Minister must have experience or knowledge in workplace relations, law, business, industry or commerce (proposed subsection 26(2)). In addition, one member must have experience or a background in employee representation (proposed subsection 25(c)) and one member must have experience or a background in employer representation (proposed subsection 25(d)).

Conclusion

- 7.13 The Bill implements the Wilcox Report recommendation to establish an Advisory Board (albeit without a ‘determinative’ role) because the Government accepts the important role that these bodies can play in developing and implementing public policy.

Section 8. Office of the Federal Safety Commissioner

Introduction

- 8.1 The Bill retains the provisions of the BCII Act that relate to the Federal Safety Commissioner (FSC) and its related Australian Government Building and Construction OHS Accreditation Scheme (Accreditation Scheme).

Commitment to Occupational Health and Safety

- 8.2 The Government's review of existing regulatory arrangements for the building and construction industry was never intended to address the Office of the Federal Safety Commissioner (OFSC) and the Accreditation Scheme. It has always been the Government's intention to retain the OFSC and the Accreditation Scheme.
- 8.3 Given the Government's intention to retain the OFSC and Accreditation Scheme the Terms of Reference for the Wilcox Review deliberately did not include consideration of the operations of the OFSC or Accreditation Scheme.
- 8.4 The OFSC and the Accreditation Scheme are strongly supported in the industry and retention of the OFSC and the Accreditation Scheme reflects the Government's commitment to occupational health and safety (OHS) compliance in the building and construction industry.
- 8.5 The building and construction industry's OHS performance needs dramatic improvement, with industry data showing disturbing numbers of injuries and fatalities. Established in 2005, the FSC works with industry and government stakeholders to ensure that building work that is funded directly or indirectly by the Australian Government is undertaken by builders who recognise the significance of OHS and ensure that it is a key element of their business. The key functions of the FSC (and the OFSC) include: promoting sustainable OHS cultural change in the building and construction industry; developing and administering the Accreditation Scheme; and identifying and progressing initiatives to improve OHS performance. These functions will continue to drive the OFSC's activities under the proposed legislation.

Conclusion

- 8.6 The Government remains committed to the highest standards of occupational health and safety in the building and construction industry.
- 8.7 The OFSC and its related Accreditation Scheme have resulted in demonstrated improvements in the occupational health and safety practices of accredited companies and related projects.
- 8.8 The OFSC will continue to support and encourage industry and government stakeholders in working towards achieving the highest possible occupational health and safety standards on building and construction projects.

Section 9. Transitional and Consequential Provisions

Introduction

- 9.1 Schedule 2 of the Bill provides for transitional arrangements and consequential amendments to other Acts.
- 9.2 As a general statement of principle, the arrangements which will apply to the transition from the ABCC to the Building Inspectorate will, wherever practicable, be similar to those applying to the transition of pre-existing agencies to Fair Work Australia.

Investigations and Prosecutions

- 9.3 Subject to the passage of the Bill it is the Government's intention that the following broad transitional arrangements will apply:
- investigations and prosecutions commenced by the ABCC will be transferred to the Building Inspectorate;
 - no transitional arrangements will be made for compulsory examination notices, meaning that any such notices would need to be reissued in accordance with the new processes provided in the Bill; and
 - until such time as the Director has met with and taken account of the Advisory Group's views, the policies and programs of the Building Inspectorate will be set by the Director, however, they must be consistent with written instructions provided to the Director by the Minister for Employment and Workplace Relations.

Resources

- 9.4 The Government will honour its commitment to maintain the current resources allocated to the ABCC. Subject to the passage of the Bill it is expected that the current ABCC funding for 2009/10 and 2010/2011 will transfer to the Building Inspectorate other than any minor elements to be made available to the other Commonwealth bodies performing related functions (e.g. the AAT and Commonwealth Ombudsman in respect of their proposed new functions).
- 9.5 It is anticipated an interdepartmental committee in relation to the transition from the ABCC to the Building Inspectorate would not be formed until late September. This timing will ensure any proposals may be informed by the Senate inquiry report.
- 9.6 ABCC employees engaged under the Public Service Act 1999 will be subject to machinery of government change provisions under section 72 of that Act and will transfer to the Building Inspectorate.

- 9.7 Existing Statutory Office holders established under the BCII Act (Commissioner and Deputy Commissioners) will be able to apply for the statutory position in the Building Inspectorate (Director). If unsuccessful they will be dealt with in accordance with the longstanding arrangements for compensation for early loss of office as determined by the Remuneration Tribunal.

Section 10. Conclusion

- 10.1 The Bill delivers on the Government's commitment to implement a strong set of compliance arrangements for all building and construction industry participants. It makes it clear that the Government will not tolerate intimidation or violence by any party in the industry, or any conduct which breaks the law. The Bill acknowledges the critical importance of an efficient and effective building industry to Australia's economic wellbeing and the need for a specialist industry regulator for the industry.
- 10.2 The Hon Murray Wilcox QC consulted extensively in producing his report. This was followed by further consultations by the Government with stakeholders on the Wilcox Report recommendations and possible approaches.
- 10.3 The Government considered the Wilcox Report to be well considered and balanced and it is on this basis that the Bill gives effect to the reports recommendations (with some modifications) including, in particular, all of the recommended safeguards in relation to the compulsory examination powers to be retained by the Building Inspectorate. The Bill also includes provisions enabling the removal of the compulsory examination powers in relation to lawful projects in recognition that most industry participants are decent and honest and to give the industry the opportunity to demonstrate continuing cultural change.
- 10.4 The Government believes the Bill appropriately balances the need to ensure the positive lasting cultural changes in the industry continue, the requirement for a strong cop on the beat and fairness.

WILCOX REPORT RECOMMENDATIONS

Recommendation 1:

The proposed Specialist Division be located within the Office of the Fair Work Ombudsman but have:

- (i) operational autonomy under a Director, appointed by the Minister, who would implement policies, programs and priorities determined by an advisory board comprising the Fair Work Ombudsman, the Director and a number of part-time members appointed by the Minister; and
- (ii) funds allocated each year against an Outcome related only to the Specialist Division.

Recommendation 2:

The provisions of the Fair Work Bill governing:

- (i) the conduct of employers, employees and industrial associations; and
 - (ii) penalties for contraventions of the Fair Work Bill;
- apply, unchanged, to participants in the building and construction industry.

Recommendation 3:

The Director of the Building and Construction Division be invested with a power, similar to that contained in section 52 of the Building and Construction Industry Improvement Act 2005, to cause people compulsorily to attend for interrogation, but subject to the safeguards contained in Recommendation 4; and

- (i) the grant of this power be reviewed after five years;
- (ii) in order to ensure review, the provisions in the new legislation providing for compulsory interrogation be made subject to a five-year sunset clause.

Recommendation 4:

The use of compulsory interrogation be subject to the following safeguards:

- (i) a notice to a person compulsorily to attend for interrogation be issued only by a presidential member of the Administrative Appeals Tribunal who is satisfied by written material, which may include evidence on the basis of “information and belief”, that:
 - (a) the Building and Construction Division has commenced an investigation into a particular suspected contravention, by one or more building industry participants, of the Fair Work Act, an “industrial law”, as defined by that Act, or an industrial instrument made under that Act;
 - (b) there are reasonable grounds to believe that a particular person has information or documents relevant to that investigation, or is capable of giving evidence that is relevant to that investigation;
 - (c) it is likely to be important to the progress of the investigation that this information or evidence, or those documents, be obtained; and
 - (d) having regard to the nature and likely seriousness of the suspected contravention, any alternative method of obtaining the information, evidence or documents and the likely impact upon the person of being required to do so, insofar as this is known, it is reasonable to require that person to attend before the Director or a Deputy Director and answer questions and/or produce documents relevant to the investigation;

- (ii) the Director or a Deputy Director of the Building and Construction Division preside at all compulsory interrogations;
- (iii) the Commonwealth Ombudsman monitor proceedings at all compulsory interrogations and for that purpose the Director:
 - (a) promptly notify the Commonwealth Ombudsman of the issue of all notices to attend for interrogation; and
 - (b) promptly after the interrogation, supply to the Commonwealth Ombudsman a report, a video recording of the interrogation and a copy of any written transcript; and
- (iv) the Commonwealth Ombudsman report to Parliament annually, and otherwise as required, concerning the exercise of the power of compulsory interrogation.

Recommendation 5:

The legislation authorising compulsory interrogation provide for:

- (i) payment to persons summoned for interrogation of their reasonable expenses (travelling, accommodation and legal, as may be) and any loss of wages or other income; and
- (ii) recognition and availability of client legal privilege and public interest immunity.

Recommendation 6:

- (i) A new Division 4 be added to Part 5-2 of the Fair Work Bill relating to the “building and construction industry”, as therein defined.
- (ii) The definition of “building and construction industry” follow the definition of “building work” in the Building and Construction Industry Improvement Act 2005, but excluding off-site work.

Recommendation 7:

The Director of the Building and Construction Division have all the functions, powers and responsibilities, in relation to the “building and construction industry”, as defined in the new legislation, that the Fair Work Ombudsman has in respect of other industries; including, in particular, investigation of suspected unlawful behaviour by any building industry participant (whether employer, employee or industrial association) and the prosecution of penalty and other legal proceedings.

Recommendation 8:

Except perhaps in rural and remote areas, the Building and Construction Division have its own dedicated operational staff, including inspectors.
