

From:
Mr Joe Landers

I am very familiar with the NAPLAN tests and it is an excellent tool for taking a snapshot of students' abilities for the purpose of addressing any weaknesses in their education. This is what it is designed for. It is not designed for measuring the quality of education at a school, and its use as such, in league tables, is therefore highly irrelevant and inappropriate.