Review of post-sentence terrorism orders: Division 105A of the Criminal Code Act 1995

Dear Committee,

We appreciate the opportunity to make a submission on Review of post-sentence terrorism orders: Division 105A of the Criminal Code Act 1995. We note that the Independent National Security Legislation Monitor recommended the abolition of continuing detention orders and any review should consider whether indefinite detention needs to be sentenced initially rather than in the leadup to expiration of sentence.

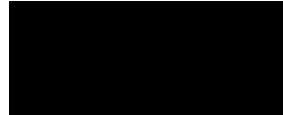

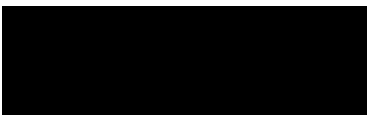

Please find linked our submission to the Independent National Security Legislation Monitor's review into Division 105A. It is available here on the INSLM website, submission number #14.

In this submission, we highlighted the following as relevant to the review of post-sentence terrorism orders;

- The challenges relating to risk assessment tools and methodologies for a range of extremists,
- Support for the establishment of an independent statutory body to oversee validation of risk assessment tools,
- Human rights concerns surrounding the lack of rehabilitation as a paramount considerations in addition to community safety,

This is also discussed verbally on Day 1 of the public hearings, linked here on the INSLM website.

Kind regards,

Professor Mark Nolan
