

Sent: Tuesday, 8 June 2010 10:24 AM

To: Web, Administrator (SEN)

Subject:

Dear Senator:

I am writing to you to talk about my opinions about the MIGRATION AMENDMENT (VISA CAPPING) BILL 2010. Firstly, I don't think this amendment is fair to students who have lodged the application. People who are qualified to apply PR which means they have paid for study at least 2 years, found a job and have provided work experience. Everything goes under the legislation of immigration which means legal. And the main point is, under several changes in migration policy, no matter how hard to be qualified to apply PR, for those who have put so many efforts on this are now maybe going to be disqualified. Why people tried so hard to stay here, because they are really willing to stay in Australia. Most of people who have lodged applications already got a stable job, a car and even got a house, because they believe they will get permission to stay in Australia very soon. Do you think is fair for those have done so much efforts and receive nothing at the end?

Secondly, people just say it out amendment then policy changes. Have they think about students? Now is not pointing to those haven't applied PR, obviously, they are so tough during these 2 years because policy always change. Even worse is now pointing at students who have applied PR. Policy changed, students need to find another way to solve the change. They still have choice. How about people who have lodged application? They have given all what immigration needs and now just saying ' we don't need such population because of the economy' and then simply just reject applications. Cookery and Hairdressing are the most likely range to be rejected because the government doesn't want these skills anymore or they are too many. Why didn't the government say it before people have done everything. The problem is not skills are now not needed, it's not students' fault for what they have been studying, is government's fault that hasn't do the plan properly.

It is still qualified when students applied applications, but why now, after more than a year waiting, saying it's not qualified? Australia is known as immigration and government are reliable, and now IT IS JUST CHEATING ON US!

Please consider.....

Regards

Wanna