

Dear Sir,

When I came to Australia, I was full with dreams of settling here. I choose the way government supported. That is Residency through Study. I abide all rules and I already started working in my own field with one employer.

However, if this cap and cease law affects me, I would be having no time to apply for another visa. In general, students need time to gain experience. If this law affects them, then even the opportunity to acquire experience would be gone. Already government had faded our dreams. Please do not harm any more. Genuine applicant must be found so that they are not affected, though it would be unfair to say that person with degree and experience are genuine than person with only degree. Therefore, intention to stay and contribute to the culture and society, which are intangible factor must be considered. This is not simple for Government and for us too. It would dramatically change our life. If you slash 1000 applicants, more than 1000 will affect, because there are dependents and many family members.

I am a student and planning to apply in July 2010 with new SOL occupation. I had excellent academic report in first 3 terms. Since 8th February 2010 and this law fever had spread, I can't concentrate in my study. I was a student for who every lecturer was considering for Director's Award. Because of possibility of bleak future, I did worst in my last semester and my GPA had affected. Constant fear is running in everyone's mind, what they would do if you kick us out?

Please do not make things hard on us. We have invested our money, emotion, hard work and above all desire to be here. Please get us in queue but do not terminate us.
