

Dear Senate members, I am very concerned that CSG mining has not yet been proven to be absolutely safe for the waterways and systems in Australia. There is now more clear evidence that CSG mining is polluting, especially in parts of the Great Artesian Basin, yet energy companies are clearly more interested in profits than the long term sustainability and safety of their activities. Please pass laws that guarantee environmental and scientific assessment processes are uncorrupted and independent of the interests of companies and politicians.

Yours Sincerely
Adam Aitken
