

Mining and coal seam gas operations have the potential to impact both on the quantity and quality of water reserves. Impacts not only involve excess usage of water, but contamination of water bodies and disruption and pollution to important aquifers that provide important ecosystem services and upon which the agricultural / food production sectors rely.

Assessment of proposals to determine the impacts on water reserves is essential.

Kind regards
Nigel Greenup