

As a principal and teacher at a small rural school I am dismayed and annoyed at the My School website with regards to the use of Naplan data.

My town is a poor town, my cohorts are small and therefore easily distorted by the results of just one child (that child could be 25%, 33% 50% or even 100% of the grade levels tested).

For potential families (and existing families) to see the data out of context is so unfair and a misrepresentation of the great work our school community is doing to enhancing our student's educational and social outcomes.
