

Dear Sir/Madam,

I am writing this document because I would like to say something about the Visa Capping Program.

I present the point of view from an international student that has gained degree(s) from this country, and currently has already applied for Australia PR.

After I arrived at Australia, I realized the beauty and peace of this country, and I decided to stay here to start my future. After all these years I made my life plan just followed the policy that made by the immigration department (despite it always changes). Many others have the same instance. Students spent their time, spent their money and try to satisfy the requirement just because the government says if they do so, they could get PR (based on the law and policy). It may not be a guarantee because the policy may change before they make the application.

However for those who have already satisfied all requirements and have already submitted their applications, it could be unfair to cancel or terminate their applications. May be the current situation is that there are much more applicants than it demands, but this is not the applicants' fault, it may be the problem of the policy. So why should the innocent people take the responsibility and consequences? Once the government accepts the application and the application meets the requirement, it is like a deal, it is a matter of honor. Many people made changes of their lives and made great efforts, and luckily they meet the requirement before it changed. In this progress they actually made many great contributes to this country. They spend their money to invest for vehicles, real estate, businesses and etc. They spend their time to communication and built up their new relationships with people, which will make Australia a wonderful multi-culture country. Students with high education levels also have the potential to make greater contributions to the economy and society. And can give solutions to labor requirement from the market.

Once the application has made and accepted, according to the law (currently) the application must be admitted if all requirement is met, it is only a matter of time. Then people start to plan their future in this country. However if their applications are terminated, they will lose many things.

So if possible do please consider my comments a little bit when you make any decision. This is not only about the fate of a single applicant, but also the reputation of Australia government, and the future of this beautiful country.

Regards
