

The role of a publicly funded broadcaster should be to air material which is not provided by the market. This should include drama and comedy with artistic and intellectual content as well as coverage of local and international performing and visual arts. Instead the current ABC television programming includes a preponderance of imported crime, science fiction and supernatural dramas.