

Hi All:

I am really can't understand why the government want to accept the Migration Amendment (Visa Capping) Bill 2010, it's totally no fair.

I got a job, work as a chef in the jetty's restaurant in Perth. I love this city, that why makes me want to apply the pr. I m on the TR visa now, I should get PR by now after I got 18 months working experience. I found my girlfriend here, we rent a house, because we can't buy one, the house is very expensive if we can't loan the money from the bank. I thought we are going to buy a house soon and get married. But now it looks everything will be not happen. We rent a small house, everyday we just go work and come back, stay at home, cooking, watch movie and it was Very nice and very sweet but I can't believe if this law active and it might make us break up. I m go back to my country, and she will be still here or go back to her country. We all got job, and hard working. We pay tax to the government. Why the governments still want us going away? I am really disappointed about that. And I follow what government needs and well educated, that's really unfair. We stay here to help the economic of the Australia. There are 147,000 peoples, if every single one pays 1 dollars tax to government and after one year. The government will have 53.655.000 dollars to make Australia's economic.

By the way can you please think about if the government will get any benefit if send all of us home? We buy car here, buy house here, do business here, all we doing is just make us life better and help Australia. Why now u want send us home? How fair is that? If I m going back one day with other 147,000 compatriots, I am sure the future of the Australia will be very bad, because the government always did wrong stuff. I hope the The Senate vetoed this bill.

Best Regard

Fan Yue Lin
11/06/10