Inquiry into Treasury Laws Amendment (GST Low Value Goods) Bill 2017

UPS Pty Ltd Submission

United Parcel Service (Australia) (UPS Pty Ltd) is one of the of the world's leading integrated air express parcel delivery companies.

Through its industry body Conference of Asia Pacific Express Carriers (CAPEC) have been invited to lodge a submission to the Senate Economics Legislation Committee in respect to the Inquiry into the Treasury Laws Amendment (GST Low Value Goods) Bill 2017 ("Inquiry").

Executive Summary

The issue of Australia's Low Value de minimus threshold is one that CAPEC members have been closely involved with since, at least, the alignment of the air cargo and postal services in October 2005.

More recently, CAPEC has worked extensively with a number of different government-appointed parties in examining the ongoing viability of the A$1,000 Goods and Services Tax ("GST")-free threshold. Those parties have included:

- Board of Taxation Review (2009)
- Productivity Commission (Inquiry into the Future of the Australian Retail Industry 2011)
- Low Value Parcel Processing Taskforce (2012)
- Interdepartmental Committee – Low Value Threshold Project (2013)
- Treasury Steering Committee on Vendor Collect Model (2015 - present)

In considering the GST-free threshold, each of these parties reached the same conclusion with regard to the cost of GST collection at the border (upon arrival). That is, that the cost of collection would exceed any GST revenue gained, resulting in a net welfare cost.

The Treasury Laws Amendment (GST Low Value Goods) Bill 2017 ("Bill") proposes to amend the A New Tax System (Goods and Services Tax) Act 1999 to ensure that GST is payable on certain supplies of low value goods that are purchased by consumers and imported into Australia. The proposed changes are predicated on a Vendor Collect Model ("VCM"), i.e. where the overseas supplier collects GST at the point of sale and remits this GST component to the Australian Taxation Office ("ATO") directly.

UPS supports the Bill, in so far as it endorses a fairer tax system through a VCM. However, UPS does NOT support the obligation proposed by the current draft Bill which requires additional vendor registration information to be captured and reported by UPS.

It is UPS's firm view that the information flow should be between the overseas vendor and the ATO

Accordingly, UPS requests that the draft Bill be amended so as to reflect such an information flow.

UPS through CAPEC are prepared to work with Treasury to ensure that the draft Bill achieves both the Government's intended policy objectives and also ensures the ongoing competitive viability of CAPEC members and the services they provide.

Disparity with Australia Post

During its discussions with Treasury, CAPEC has been informed that Australia Post will be exempt from the requirement in the draft Bill to report the Vendor Registration Number ("VRN") and Australian Business Number ("ABN") on low value imported goods.

Australia Post has gone on record declaring that it competes directly with CAPEC members and the air express industry more broadly.¹ Adding cost to CAPEC members' operating models through increased regulatory burden will give an additional unfair advantage to Australia Post, to the detriment of CAPEC members' ability to compete against Australia Post. Further, CAPEC members are concerned that the lack of commensurate regulatory burden in the postal model (i.e. sending products via Australia Post) may lead to overseas vendors choosing the postal stream in order to avoid customs detection; which in turn may lead to a reduced recovery of GST.

The vast majority of low value 'Business to Consumer' ("B2C") goods are imported into Australia via the postal stream. If, as the Bill requires, the VRN is collected from the air express industry alone, it is likely to lead to a flawed data set, covering only a fraction of imports. Analytics based on the data will therefore likely be inaccurate and of little use when auditing the compliance activity of offshore vendors.

Therefore, the absence of any requirement for Australia Post to report the VRN provides:

- a competitive advantage to Australia Post, who will not be subject to the same regulatory requirements (and resulting cost consequences) as CAPEC members;
- a pathway for uncooperative vendors to access the Australian market place; and
- a deficient data set for the ATO.

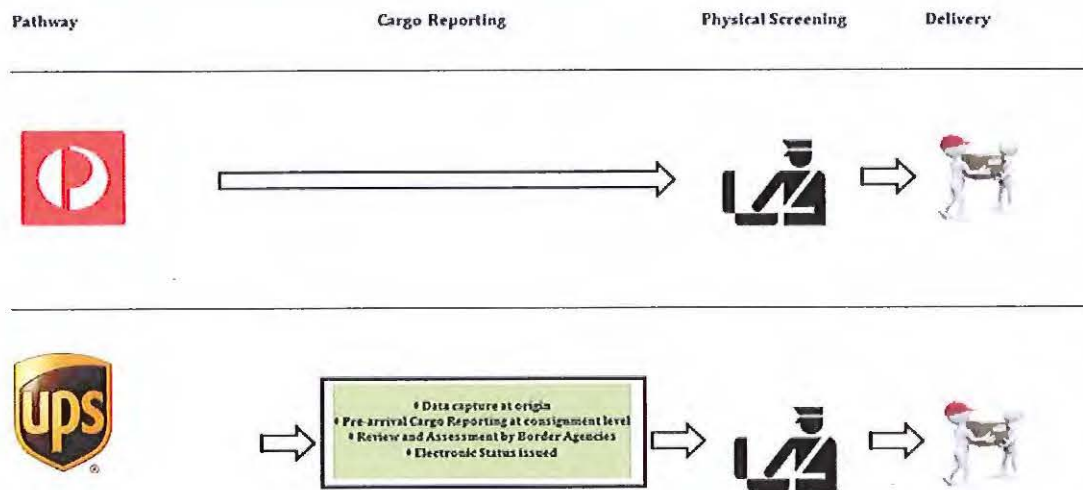

Competitive Neutrality

The legislation proposed by Treasury is also contrary the Competitive Principles Agreement (“CPA”) entered into by the Council of Australian Governments (“COAG”) in 1995,² which addresses competitive neutrality across Australia. Two key elements of the CPA are:

- (1) “Government businesses should not enjoy any net competitive advantage simply as a result of their public sector ownership”; and
- (2) Governments are to ensure that they impose the same obligations on government business enterprises as they would on privately owned enterprises, with regulatory requirements and fees being listed as specific examples.

Australia Post already experiences a significant competitive advantage over CAPEC members by its use of the postal stream to deliver parcels. Parcels brought to Australia by CAPEC members through the parcel stream are subject to additional cargo reporting requirements than if the same parcel was brought into Australia via the postal stream. The more stringent reporting requirements imposed on CAPEC members result in slower parcel delivery times and increased costs arising to CAPEC members when compared to parcels bought into Australia by Australia Post via the postal stream.

The below diagram broadly outlines the different arrangements that currently exist in respect of importing Low Value goods into Australia through the Postal and Air Express pathways.

If CAPEC members are required to report VRNs as outlined in the draft Bill, two consequences are likely. First, Australian consumers will experience further processing delays in parcel deliveries through the parcel stream, along with the attendant additional costs. Secondly, and consequently, the competitive advantage already enjoyed by Australia Post will be further exacerbated at the expense of both Australian consumers and CAPEC members.

CAPEC is preparing separate submissions to both the Australian Government Competitive Neutrality Complaints Office ("AGCNCO") and the Australian Competition and Consumer Commission ("ACCC") which it hopes will assist to resolve the above-mentioned disparities.

Furthermore, the increased regulatory burden imposed on CAPEC members, and other air express parcel delivery companies, is consistent with the Commonwealth Government's aim of improving productivity and efficiency of the Australian economy.

Vendor Registration Number ("VRN") – practical problems

The requirement in the draft Bill (albeit non-mandatory) for CAPEC members to capture the VRN at the Air Cargo Report Self Assessed Clearance ("ACR-SAC") level is also highly problematic in terms of its practical application. This is due to a number of factors including variances such as; shippers' ordering systems and CAPEC member reporting platforms, processes having to be significantly modified to ensure compatibility and compliance, and education and cultural differences with shippers in the 220 countries that CAPEC members operate. This will add both complexity and cost to the border clearance process and not comply with the efficient and effective models that the OECD and G20 working groups advocate for.

The VRN requirement will result in substantial changes to CAPEC members' worldwide ICT systems. This would take several years to complete and come at a significant cost. Other considerations include:

- Members' IT systems bridge over 200 countries and territories;
- Adding extra fields and logic for the requirements on one country only is problematic given the global nature of CAPEC members' businesses and systems; and
- CAPEC members will not be involved in the collection of this GST revenue, so the requirement to capture and report VRNs is a superfluous and highly inefficient one.

CAPEC members are concerned that the ATO and Treasury may have an oversimplified view in terms of what lead time, cost and impact these IT systems changes represent.

Alternate VRN Collection and Reporting Models

CAPEC understands that the collection and reporting of the VRN data to the ATO is an important element of the draft Bill. However, its members are of the view that there are more efficient ways of achieving this outcome that will result in a complete data set, i.e. not just from one industry sector (Air Express). These constructive alternate options can be summarized as follows:

1. Vendor Self-Collection and Audit

Upon registration, the overseas vendor agrees to provide periodic reporting to the ATO on what it ships to Australia and what GST it collects. Note: Treasury officials have indicated a desire to minimize the reporting requirements for registered vendors; however CAPEC members understand that this information would be readily available to the vendors through running a cursory 'value' + 'trade lane' query at the end of each period. The added advantage of this model is that it would capture goods being shipped via all pathways, including the postal stream.

CAPEC members understand that there are only a limited amount of vendor interface systems in use by suppliers, thus streamlining the process further.

2. Use of Existing Data

The existing process for reporting low value shipments in the Integrated Cargo System ("ICS") in any event, i.e. via an ACR-SAC should provide sufficient detail for the ATO to undertake its compliance monitoring. Note: To counter the challenge of multiple entity names being used, the vendor would agree to apply a mutually agreed naming convention at time of registration which the Department of Immigration and Border Protection ("DIBP"), who could then report as needed to the ATO through the ICS.

In support of this option, provided below is a screen shot of the ACR-SAC taken from the ICS, which demonstrates the information currently provided to the Department of Immigration and Border Protection, by CAPEC members for all Low Value consignments entering Australia:

Timing

The 01 July 2017 go-live date for the legislation is overly ambitious and should immediately be deferred to a later, more workable date. UPS contend that having less than three months to implement any changes is an unreasonably tight timeframe. For policy reform this important and wide-ranging in nature, it is appropriate that a longer timeframe is granted.

Conclusion

The VCM is acknowledged by UPS as the most sensible approach to achieving a fairer tax system. UPS commend the decision of Treasury to avoid a model whereby GST is collected upon arrival at the border. This is consistent with both the report that CAPEC members submitted to Treasury in February 2016 and the Productivity Commission's findings vis-à-vis avoiding a solution that would create a net welfare cost.

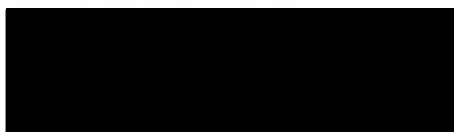

UPS are concerned, however, that the model in its proposed form will lead to increased regulatory burden and resulting cost to the industry and the air express supply chain, primarily through the collection of the VRN and the intention to have this data included in the ACR-SAC (or not, as the case may be).

The exemption of Australia Post from the VRN reporting requirement is untenable. UPS contend that any such exemption would be anti-competitive in nature as, among other things, it will affect further the ability of UPS to compete against Australia Post. As discussed above, CAPEC intends to pursue this broader issue further through the AGCNCO and ACCC.

UPS therefore support the Bill on the proviso that appropriate amendments are made that remove the additional data (VRN) reporting requirements on UPS. This will ensure that GST is collected and remitted to the ATO more efficiently while creating a more level playing field between UPS and Australia Post.

UPS would like to thank the Committee for the opportunity to contribute to the Inquiry and looks forward to ongoing consultation, including participating in any hearings to answer questions on this important piece of legislation.

Yours sincerely,
