COVID inquiry visits Liverpool Hospital

A parliamentary committee inquiry will hear from frontline health professionals about treating long COVID and its effect on the health system.

The public hearing will be held on Monday, 5 December 2022 at Liverpool Hospital in South West Sydney as part of the House Health Committee's inquiry into long COVID and repeated COVID infections.

The Chair of the Committee, Dr Mike Freeland MP, said: 'The hearing will be an opportunity to hear from frontline health professionals about how our health system is managing long COVID, and their experience supporting patients with repeated COVID infections during some of the toughest days of the pandemic'.

The Deputy Chair of the Committee, Mrs Melissa McIntosh MP, stated: 'The Committee is looking forward to hearing from hospitals, research organisations and other healthcare workers about what they have learned so far about long COVID and repeated COVID infections based on their observations while treating COVID-positive patients both during their infection and in the months after'.

The Committee intends to hold more public hearings in due course. While submissions to the inquiry closed on 18 November 2022, individuals and organisations wishing to make a late submission should contact the Secretariat by email at health.reps@aph.gov.au as soon as possible.

Further information about the inquiry, including the terms of reference and published submissions are available on the Committee's website.
