

Department of Jobs and Small Business

QoN6—What data do you have around the Transition to Work Program—how many young people re-engage back into the school system?

From the start of the service in February 2016 to 31 August 2018, over 61,000 young people have received assistance through Transition to Work. The service has facilitated accredited and non-accredited education and training placements for 29,648 young people. This includes 1,531 participants who returned to the schooling system, while 28,676 continued education in a TAFE or other further education setting. For many participants this may have included working towards completion of Year 12.