

To whom it may concern

I believe that faith based institutions should have the right to employ staff that support the faith that they subscribe to.

In a free society, there are many secular institutions that people can be employed by if they have a different belief system (this is what a free society is: a society that has many options within itself). Live and let live.

There are many educational institutions with different belief systems and I guess you look for the one that fits you best, instead of trying to manipulate or change the other.
