

Dear Sir/Madam,

I acknowledged that DIAC intend to enact legislation that will allow them to axe many 1000s of applications from people who have been waiting patiently for substantial periods of time already. I strongly think that this is totally unfair and does great damage to Australia's international reputation. Specifically, it is extremely unfair for my situation as well. As an international student, I came to Australia with the passion of getting bachelor degree, developing skills, and getting a good job, applying all of the knowledge I have learnt and work in Australia. Firstly, I have spent so much money for the study fee. Secondly, I have tried really hard in study with the main goal of developing my knowledge and contribute to Australia's economy after I graduate. I have chosen to stay back during summer period to undertake 2 summer courses; therefore I can finish my degree quicker, in 2 and a half year instead of 3 years. As a young person with a great passion, I have planned everything for my future in Australia, and now after I graduated, I just got an interview from a good company and will be potentially accepted for the position. I have set so many plans and am on the way achieving it, with the passion of staying, working, and contributing to Australia's economy. Therefore, this axing is completely unfair for me, the one who have stayed here for 3 years and have been so hard working. Thirdly, I lodged my application 886 with my auntie sponsors me, I have spent lots of time preparing for the application, to make sure that I can lodge my application straight after I graduate. I was extremely happy after the lodgement is successful, and now I am in the stage of seeking for a really good job while waiting for the permanent resident visa to be granted in 2 years. If the rule is changed, it should not be applied to people who have been lodged their application and have been waiting patiently for substantial periods of time already; because it is unethical and it is extremely not fair. I have not been noticed anything about this axing before, and I myself, my family, my lecturers in University, and all of my friends both in Australia and in my country are strongly against this unfair axing. Every international student chooses Australia as a country to come and study because of its fairness system and education. This unfair axing will definitely have extreme damage to Australia's international reputation; will strongly affect Australia's economy due to the definite decrease in the number of intelligent young people with high skills and strong passion of success. Now, I strongly advise the senate enquiry that this Migration Amendment should not be accepted due to its great negative influences to a large majority of people.
