

Restating the “In Australia” Special Conditions for Tax Concession Entities
Submission in Response to Exposure Draft Issue
4 July 2011

Aid to the Church in Need

Contact: Phillip Collignon
National Director
Aid to the Church in Need (Australia)
PO Box 6245
BLACKTOWN DC NSW 2148

Tel: (02) 9679 1929
Email: info@aidtochurch.org

Contact: Martin Teulan
National Director - Australia
Catholic Mission
PO Box 1668
NORTH SYDNEY NSW 2059

Tel: (02) 9919 7800
Email: diector@catholicmission.org.au

Restating the “In Australia” Special Conditions for Tax Concession Entities

This submission is in response to the Exposure Draft released by the Assistant Treasurer on 4 July 2011 titled “Restating the In Australia Special Conditions for Tax Concession Entities”. Aid to the Church in Need (ACN) and Catholic Mission (CM) welcome the opportunity to contribute to the discussion by way of this submission and we look forward to the opportunity of continuing to interact with Government as it further develops policy on these matters.

The submission is structured as follows:

1. About Aid to the Church in Need
2. About Catholic Mission
3. General comments on policy issues
4. Specific issues

Both ACN and CM are part of the Catholic Church and are aware of the submission made by the Australian Catholic Bishops Conference (ACBC) on 30 July 2011. The submission by the ACBC indicated “some sectors of the Church, for example, the Church Missionary Agencies, may make additional sector-specific responses to the Exposure Draft”. Both ACN and CM are in agreement with all issues put forward by ACBC in its submission and offer this additional submission by way of a specific response to the Exposure Draft to deal with issues specific to missionary agencies of the Church.

1. Aid to the Church in Need

The office of ACN was first established first in Australia in 1963 on a voluntary basis and continued to operate as such until 1990 when a full time office was inaugurated. ACN in Australia is endorsed as a charitable institution and thereby entitled to GST concession, FBT rebate and income tax exemption. It is not entitled to receive tax deductible gifts. It operates legally in Australia through a corporate trustee known as the Trustees of Aid to the Church in Need incorporated under the Roman Catholic Church Communities Land Act 1942 (NSW).

In 2010, ACN's total gross income raised in Australia was more than $5 million. Its income (after deduction of local expenses) is forwarded to the international headquarters of Aid to the Church in Need in Germany or paid out to other charitable organisations at the direction of the headquarters of Aid to the Church in Need in Germany.

ACN in Australia is part of an international Catholic charity under papal jurisdiction. Its main purpose is the promotion of pastoral and religious activities, especially in areas where the Church is persecuted or prevented by various obstacles from fulfilling her proper mission. The charity also supports refugees from regions where the Church is persecuted. The charity was founded in 1947 by a Dutch Norbetine priest, Father Werenfried van Straaten, who appealed for help for the 14 million German refugees expelled from their homes in the former German territories of Eastern Europe. In the late 1940s to 1950s, Father Werenfried campaigned to provide priests in Europe with vehicles to deliver material aid to refugee priests and financial support for the training of priests.

In the 1950s to 1960s, ACN expanded its charitable activities throughout the world, from providing aid to China and North Vietnam, to the Greek-Catholic Church in Ukraine, to campaigns for the Church in Africa. Many national offices of the ACN around the world were established during this time. By 1984, ACN had offices or representation in more than 13 countries and was recognised by Rome as an Association of Pontifical Right of the Universal Church.

The charitable work of ACN continued to expand in the 1990s via numerous campaigns and projects, including its new aid programme for the re-evangelisation of Eastern Europe and the increase in aid for the persecuted Church in Communist China. By 2006, ACN had national offices in 17 different countries. The international office is located in Germany, and acts as the charity's central source for information and project management for grants that are sent on to their Church project partners throughout the world.

ACN receives all of its income from private donations and bequests. Its income, derived from donations from more than 600,000 benefactors around the world, is distributed to Catholic churches in need in 144 countries around the world and supports more than 5,000 projects worldwide.

The income received by ACN is used to fulfil its primary mission to provide pastoral relief to needy and oppressed people and Churches throughout the world. Work and support is prioritised towards training seminarians and catechists, support for religious sisters, charitable help for refugees, and the building and renovation of churches, convents, seminaries and catechesis centres. ACN's income is also used towards translating, printing and dispatch of Bibles and religious literature, including the publication of the Child's Bible, of which over 43 million copies have been distributed in over 150 languages.

Over €65 million was distributed to 153 countries in 2010 for work relating to construction, mass offerings, pastoral aid, theological formation, catechesis, media apostolate, bible apostolate, transport, subsistence aid and emergency aid.

2. Catholic Mission

CM is the Australian arm of the Catholic Church's global mission aid agency in a worldwide network known as the Pontifical Mission Societies. CM was specifically commissioned by the Pope to promote a universal spirit of mission, and to provide both spiritual and financial support to young and growing Churches around the world.

CM was founded in 1822 in France and is the oldest mission aid agency in the Catholic Church. For more than 185 years CM has initiated or been involved in charitable projects in 160 countries around the world, in Africa, Asia, Oceania and Americas. In 1996, the name of the Pontifical Mission Societies was changed to "Catholic Mission – the work of the Pontifical Mission Societies".

CM assists people living in situations of extreme poverty, dramatic climate change, with HIV/AIDS, persecution from military dictatorships and extremists, racial and religious wars, and those who have suffered the loss of family ties and land to commercial exploitation.

While comprised of three autonomous Societies, that is, areas of work, CM is one organisation committed to the worldwide mission of the Church by providing mission animation to the people of Australia and through practical support of the various works undertaken by the three Societies. The three Societies are named Children's Mission (working with children), St Peter Apostle (working with communities) and Propagation of Faith (working with Church leaders). All three Societies have a global focus, especially to disadvantaged parts of the world.

CM is funded by donations and bequests from Australian and overseas donors. A significant source of income derives from donations collected by Catholic dioceses across Australia. In 2010, over $16 million was collected by Australian dioceses that contributed to CM's gross income. Other sources of income derive from private donations, bequests, donations collected by schools and other educational establishments and partnerships.

CM assists a significant number of persons and communities around the world. For example, in the last year, Children's Mission, the Society of CM that aids children in need, assisted more than 2.66 million children globally. CM is the only Catholic organisation with global works specifically dedicated to children.

While the charitable work carried out by CM takes place primarily overseas, CM runs a campaign named Home Mission Fund that assists large rural dioceses of Australia that have significant Aboriginal populations. One third of the funds raised by CM for its work with communities are distributed to the Home Mission Fund.

According to CM's 2010 Annual Report, its income was distributed in the following ways:

- About $8 million in total was distributed overseas towards its charitable campaigns:
 - More than $3 million was distributed in 31 countries for the Working with Children campaign;
 - More than $3 million was distributed in 10 countries for the Working with Communities campaign; and
 - Over $840,000 was distributed in seven countries for the Working with Church Leaders campaign.
- Almost $2 million was distributed in Australia for its Home Mission Fund campaign.

CM is endorsed as a charitable institution and accesses GST concession, FBT rebate and income tax exemption. It also operates a deductible gift recipient fund known as Catholic Mission Overseas Mission Aid Fund. This submission does not relate to the Catholic Mission Overseas Mission Aid Fund but is only in respect of the non deductible gift recipient activities of Catholic Mission which are dependent upon donations which do not attract tax deductions to donors.

CM operates legally in Australia through a corporate trustee known as "Catholic Mission" incorporated under the Roman Catholic Church Communities Lands Act 1942 (NSW).

3. General Comments on Policy Issues

Both ACN and CM clearly fall under categories identified as charitable activities by Lord MacNaghten in *Pemsel's*¹ case as being for the advancement of religion and/or the relief of poverty and/or other purposes beneficial to the community not falling into the preceding categories.

Both ACN and CM have operated for many decades within Australia and carried on their charitable activities for the benefit of Australian and international communities.

CM has been instrumental over its time in Australia in contributing to the establishment of religious groups including many of the Catholic Religious Orders who are the largest providers of non-profit education, age care, hospitals and welfare in Australia. This is an example of where donations made by generous donors in overseas countries have provided assistance in establishing significant charitable and social welfare structures in Australia. Australia has received this benefit over the centuries and should encourage provision of similar benefits to overseas countries in need, as provided by these missionary agencies.

By any definition, both ACN and CM are charitable institutions and have been recognised as such for many decades without challenge.

As such, they have attracted tax concessions which have assisted each in carrying on their charitable activities. It is important and relevant to note that each of these entities is dependent upon donations made by individuals in Australia who are making these donations from "after tax" funds and donors are not seeking tax deductions in respect of those donations.

The charitable works of ACN and CM are undertaken as an expression of solidarity with Church communities universally. These entities seek to support people not only within national boundaries but all human need wherever it may occur.

There has been no suggestion of abuse of taxation concessions by either ACN or CM.

Both entities have arrangements for remitting funds for worthy causes overseas through networks of the offices of local conferences, diocesan bishops or other church authorities. There has been no suggestion that funds have been used for any improper purpose.

The proposals in the Exposure Draft are likely to have the effect of disentitling ACN and CM to income tax exemption (and other tax exemptions). ACN and CM submit that such an outcome is unjust and unwarranted and would have the effect of reducing funds available for each entity to carry out its charitable works.

4. Specific Issues

In addition to the matters raised in the submission by the ACBC, ACN and CM wish to highlight the following specific and limited issues which are particular to Church missionary agencies such as ACN and CM.

ACN and CM contend that they would each qualify as entities that "operate principally in Australia and ... pursue its purposes principally in Australia" as required by proposed section 50-50(2)(a) and (b). This view is reached upon the basis that each operates and pursues its purposes (being the raising of donations to be applied in many cases by overseas entities for charitable purposes) and that this activity is undertaken and the purpose is achieved within Australia. However, the proposed amendment to the Act should make that position clearer for the sake of achieving certainty for ACN and CM and those in positions similar to them.

¹ Commissioners for Special Purposes of the Income Tax v Pemsel [1891] AC 531

Both ACN and CM are particularly concerned about the requirement in proposed section 50-50(2)(c) which would preclude both organisations from carrying out their purposes without losing their respective entitlement to tax concessions. This section would preclude ACN and CM from donating money to entities which are not exempt entities that themselves satisfy the proposed "In Australia" requirements. As can be seen above, this is the main charitable activity of each of ACN and CM.

This would have the effect of practically crippling the activities of ACN and CM and other church missionary activities which have for many decades supported charitable activities without regard to national boundaries.

Both ACN and CM expect that the government would not be intending to deny them their current tax concessions by the imposition of this new legislation and challenge the Government to look for a method to allow ACN and CM and organisations who may similarly be the victims of unintended consequences to maintain their tax concession status.

Without limiting other options which may be open to the Government, ACN and CM recommend that appropriate exemption be granted under proposed section 50-51.

The existing section 50-50(d) provides a mechanism for a prescribed institution that has a physical presence in Australia but pursues its objects principally outside Australia to maintain exemption from income tax. We note that 13 entities have been prescribed for the purpose of that regulation. We understand that the effect of the Exposure Draft will be to remove the possibility of prescription under that section. The possibility for prescribed exemption under section 50-51(3)(b) will not offer sufficient protection to ACN or CM or other currently prescribed entities.

ACN and CM submit that the Government should provide that the conditions in section 50-50(2) do not apply to an entity that is a prescribed institution that has a physical presence in Australia but which pursues its objects principally outside Australia. ACN and CM further contend that guidelines be established for such prescription that would include organisations such as ACN or CM. This could be done, for example, by prescribing corporate entities that are incorporated under legislation particular to Church bodies (eg. the Roman Catholic Church Communities Land Act).

ACN and CM further submit that the proposed section 50-50(2)(c) be amended to read:

"(c) *except for charitable purposes (whether or not within Australia), not donate money to any other entity, unless the other entity is an exempt entity.*"

ACN and CM do not submit that these are the only possible solutions and request the Government to make appropriate provision in any proposed legislation that will not have the effect of removing tax concessions presently available to ACN and CM and to other entities who may be similarly affected by unintended consequences of the proposed legislation.