Treasury submission into the inquiry into exemptions of delegated legislation from parliamentary oversight

General Comments

The Treasury supports the continued evaluation and improvement of parliamentary scrutiny processes for legislation, recognising the importance of parliamentary oversight of legislative processes. We welcome this opportunity to provide to the Committee the rationale for exemptions to disallowance for legislative instruments in the Treasury portfolio.

The Treasury is responsible for economy-wide regulatory and administrative regimes, covering tax, superannuation, corporate and financial services laws, competition and consumer law and foreign investment. Instruments are also commonly made by statutory bodies in the Treasury portfolio as part of their regulatory functions.

During the 45th Parliament, the Treasury portfolio was responsible for 12.6 per cent of all registered subordinate instruments. The number of subordinate instruments registered by Treasury was only surpassed by the Department of Health portfolio which accounted for 47.1 per cent of all subordinate instruments registered during that time.¹

There are about 2,000 Treasury and Treasury portfolio legislative instruments currently registered on the Federal Register of Legislation.² As at 16 May 2020, 385 of these instruments were not subject to disallowance. This accounts for a relatively small proportion of all legislative instruments not subject to disallowance.

² This number reflects the number of 'in force' legislative instruments listed under 'Treasury portfolio' following a search on the Federal Register of Legislation website on the 30 June 2020.

Treasury submission into the inquiry into exemptions of delegated legislation from parliamentary oversight

The most commonly cited legislation for providing an exemption from disallowance for legislative instruments within the Treasury portfolio is the Federal Financial Relations Act 2009 (231 instruments). This is followed by the Legislation (Exemptions and Other Matters) Regulation 2015 (115 instruments), which contains a variety of exemptions.

Attachment A to the submission provides further detail on the legislative instruments in the Treasury portfolio that are exempt from disallowance, the source of the exemption and the rationale for the exemption.

Information in this submission relating to the number of legislative instruments that are exempt from disallowance and the instruments identified in Attachment A is drawn from information provided by the Office of Parliamentary Counsel, which administers the Federal Register of Legislation. This information is current as at 16 May 2020. In some instances, there may be debate about whether or not a specific instrument falls within the terms of an exemption. For the sake of completeness, we understand that this data reflects the exemption (if any) identified by the relevant agency when submitting a legislative instrument for registration.³

Notifiable Instruments and Disallowance

In 2015, amendments to the Legislation Act 2003 introduced the concept of a notifiable instrument. Unlike legislative instruments, notifiable instruments are not subject to tabling, disallowance or sunseting. Notifiable instruments were intended to include instruments which are not appropriate to register as legislative instruments, but for which the level of public accessibility that comes with registration would be desirable. For the Treasury portfolio, there are currently 84 registered notifiable instruments on the Federal Register of Legislation.⁴

The introduction of notifiable instruments also removed the need for the Gazettal system. Under subsection 11(4) of the Legislation Act 2003, registering an instrument on the Federal Register of Legislation as a notifiable instrument on or after 5 March 2016 is taken to meet any publication or gazettal requirements that the instrument was otherwise subject to (whether or not the enabling legislation refers to the instrument as a notifiable instrument).

It may be of assistance to the Committee to have regard to a recent example of this. The Senate Standing Committee for the Scrutiny of Bills has raised concerns regarding the use of notifiable instruments instead of legislative instruments. This was raised most recently in relation to the Structured Finance Support (Coronavirus Economic Response Package) Act 2020 where the Scrutiny of Bills Committee requested further information about why the instrument was not subject to disallowance. The following answer was provided by the Treasurer in response:

'...A determination under subsection 13(2) of the Act is not a disallowable legislative instrument because that would frustrate the purpose of the provision. Subsection 13(2) is intended to allow me to credit additional amounts to the Account beyond the initial $15 billion that may be used to make investments of the Fund.'

³ By way of example, the Australian Securities and Investments Commission (ASIC) has advised that there are ASIC instruments that touch on superannuation that have not been consistently flagged as being exempt from disallowance.

Treasury submission into the inquiry into exemptions of delegated legislation from parliamentary oversight

Due to the nature of the COVID-19 pandemic, investments made by the Fund are likely to be made on an urgent basis. If a determination under subsection 13(2) were made disallowable, waiting for the expiry of the disallowance period would mean the opportunity to make the investment had long passed, preventing the investment from being made and frustrating the achievement of the objects of the Act set out in section 3 of the Act. Alternatively, making an investment during the disallowance period would carry risk, and could undermine commercial certainty in the investment.

We also note that the approach taken to the drafting of this provision is similar to other special account crediting provisions in Commonwealth legislation, such as exist in the Australian Business Securitisation Fund Act 2019 and the Medicare Guarantee Act 2017.'

The nature of the instrument meant that it was more appropriate to be registered as a notifiable instrument because delaying urgent expenditure to await the expiry of the disallowance process would frustrate the purpose of the instrument. The purpose is to provide additional funding to the Structured Finance Support Fund following agreement with the Finance Minister, to support access to finance for smaller lenders.

Additionally, prior to the 2015 reforms, if an instrument was not of legislative character, but still of public significance, one option for the empowering legislation was to include gazettal requirements. We note that another option was for the empowering legislation to provide that instruments that fell into this category were legislative instruments, and therefore subject to registration, but exempt from disallowance.

Effectiveness of the current regime

As noted above, the Treasury portfolio accounts for 385 legislative instruments that are not subject to disallowance which accounts for a relatively small proportion of the roughly 2,000 Treasury portfolio legislative instruments.

It is the Department's view that the current regime operates effectively to ensure that the legislative instruments are subject to appropriate parliamentary oversight.

The regime provides clear and limited exemptions that have been considered by Parliament, or have themselves been subject to parliamentary oversight. In circumstances where an exemption is appropriate, the requirement for the instrument to be registered allows for transparency and public accountability and for the instrument to remain easily accessible.

The Treasury does not propose any amendments to the current regime.

Attachment A – Treasury Portfolio Legislative Instruments Exempt from Disallowance

Name of instrument	Identified exemption from disallowance provision provided on registration	Rationale for exemption
1. ASIC Corporations (Urgent Superannuation Advice) Instrument 2017/530	Legislation (Exemptions and Other Matters) Regulation 2015, section 9, item 3	This is made under paragraph 951B(1)(b) of the Corporations Act 2001. This gives a power to ASIC to exempt a financial product or class of financial products from all or specified provisions of financial services disclosure obligations. This instrument is exempt from disallowance on the basis that it relates to superannuation, and is not a regulation. Please note that ASIC has advised that this instrument is a spent instrument and will be repealed imminently.

53. Determination of the GST Revenue Sharing Relativities for 2016-17 in Accordance with the Federal Financial Relations Act 2009	Federal Financial Relations Act 2009, subsection 8(3)	This is a Ministerial determination made under section 8 of the Federal Financial Relations Act 2009 .
54. Determination of the GST Revenue Sharing Relativities for 2017-18 in Accordance with the Federal Financial Relations Act 2009		Instruments made under section 8 of the Federal Financial Relations Act 2009 are exempt from disallowance because the Minister only makes a determination after consulting with the States and on the basis of the recommendation of the Commonwealth Grants Commission. Furthermore, the GST revenue sharing relativities do not affect the amount appropriated, only the distribution of GST payments between States.

Tariff changes can be made at short notice and therefore excise payers require assurance that excise by-laws which set out the classes of goods subject to duty are not subject to change as a result of disallowance.

The modulation factor has immediate consequences for commercial and corporate arrangements. Revising or withdrawing the modulation factor after entities have begun the process of creating or issuing credits would undermine these arrangements and potentially expose taxpayers to significant compliance costs and penalties in respect of something that is wholly beyond their control. Therefore, it is not appropriate for the legislative instrument to be subject to Parliamentary disallowance.

Name of instrument	Identified exemption from disallowance provision provided on registration	Rationale for exemption
		In relation to exemptions granted under section 25 of the Payment Systems (Regulation) Act 1998 , in principle, these instruments are intended to operate from the time they are made and commercial certainty for purchased payment facility providers may be undermined if an exemption could be disallowed at a later date.
344. Retirement Savings Account modification declaration No. 1 of 2007 345. Retirement Savings Account modification declaration No. 2 of 2007	Legislation (Exemptions and Other Matters) Regulation 2015 , section 9, item 3	These declarations are made under section 177 of the Retirement Savings Accounts Act 1997 . These are superannuation instruments that are not regulations, therefore, they are not subject to disallowance.
346. Retirement Savings Accounts Tax File Number approval No. 1 of 2017	Legislation (Exemptions and Other Matters) Regulation 2015 , section 9, item 3	This instrument is made under sections 135, 136, 138, 139 and 142 of the Retirement Savings Accounts Act 1997 . This is a superannuation instrument that is not a regulation, therefore, it is not subject to disallowance.
347. RSA Data and Payment Standards (Contribution Transitional Arrangements) Amendment 2014 348. RSA Data and Payment Standards (Payments and Information from the Commissioner of Taxation) Amendment 2016 349. RSA Data and Payment Standards 2013	Legislation (Exemptions and Other Matters) Regulation 2015 , section 9, item 3	These instruments are made under subsection 45B(3) of the Retirement Savings Accounts Act 1997 . These are superannuation instruments that are not regulations, therefore, they are not subject to disallowance.
350. Self Managed Superannuation Funds (Limited Recourse Borrowing Arrangements – In-House Asset Exclusion) Determination 2014 351. Superannuation Industry (Supervision) In-house Asset Determination – Intermediary Limited Recourse Borrowing Arrangement Determination 2020	Legislation (Exemptions and Other Matters) Regulation 2015 , section 9, item 3	These determinations are made under paragraph 71(1)(f) of the Superannuation Industry (Supervision) Act 1993 . These are superannuation instruments that are not regulations, therefore, they are not subject to disallowance.
