

1. Would you support a referral pathway to doctors and school nurses for children and young people who are vaping, or have a suggestion for an alternative mechanism?

The Australian Parents Council support the idea of establishing a referral pathway to both doctors and school nurses for children and young people dealing with vaping issues. However, an alternative mechanism could involve integrating vaping cessation programs within school health education curriculums, allowing students to access support directly within their educational environment. This approach could empower young people to seek assistance independently while also providing them with valuable education on the risks and consequences of vaping.

Jenny Branch-Allen

On behalf of APC