

To whom it may concern, I use a mobility scooter, & soon due to my condition will soon have to use a electric wheelchair. While I agree that some people are very uncaring & reckless on a scooter. The biggest problem is with the general public. Whilst I only travel at walking pace so as not to create an issue. The general public need to be also made aware of the dangers they pose to themselves. I have had on many occasions where people just stop dead in front of you for no reason & it is not that easy to stop dead. Or they just walk straight out in front of you or they block your path with shopping trolleys. So before anyone starts carrying on about scooters & regulation. Lets look at the public being made aware, as there is more people not on scooter than there is on scooters.

Russell Anderson