

Wind Farms

Good morning from the UK,

Wind farms are appearing in large numbers in some of our loveliest countryside here in Britain. They would perhaps be something we should learn to tolerate if they were effective - but in fact they are delivering dismally small amounts of electricity, even against the low calculation of their generating capability.

There must be better ways of harnessing natural resources to generate power, especially in a country as vast and sunny as Australia!

Kind regards,

Caroline Peacock