

I cannot see any problem with wind farms in rural areas. There is plenty of space to locate windfarms away from immediate contact with dwellings. Windfarms should increase property values because of rental returns on the installations.

The bottom line is that Australia, and other nations, have to adopt renewable energy technologies to respond to the two impacts of 'peak oil' and the greenhouse effect. Windfarms are the most mature mechanism to do this.