I only received the transcript this morning but have managed to glance through it and it seems to be an accurate record.

I am not sure that the following suggestion is practical for a number of reasons but it was suggested to me as a question and I am passing it on.
Would there be any purpose in having a voluntary register of people who need assistance to vote?
It was suggested that this might reduce the risk of a carer using the vote of an individual in a polling booth but I can see some privacy issues here.
