Dear Sir, Because of Sept. 11 suddenly Aircraft and Aviation became the focus of world attention, While many safety and security problems have to be addressed, we don't need an over the top knee jerk reaction to this situation. I am sure that terrorism will find other avenues, eg. shopping centres, buildings, trains just to name a few, for its activities. Why not give some attention to the root cause of terrorism, the better screening of immigrants, visitors and the "cells" we read about. The whole Aviation industry is already besieged with economic problems and legislation and the last thing needed are more burdens placed on anyone trying to make a successful business in the field.
