- (1) that certain policies of the Government, including processes for the use of ministerial discretion, limited tenure for members of the Refugee Review Tribunal, aspects of the detention policy and a lack of proper case management for claimants, have caused a significant increase in migration litigation;
- (2) that the Government refuses to make the report of the Penfold inquiry public and urgently requests the Government to make the report available;
- (3) that this bill uses the mechanism of ‘purported privative clause decisions’ to restrict judicial review of decisions made with jurisdictional error, which may be ineffective;
- (4) the views of Labor Senators during consideration of the Migration Amendment (Judicial Review) Bill 2004 that similar time-limit provisions could be unconstitutional;
- (5) that the time-limits proposed could prevent some applicants from exercising their right to judicial review;
- (6) that this bill make changes to the Acts governing the High Court, Federal Court and Federal Magistrates Court with respect to summary judgements that would affect all litigation, not simply migration litigation;
- (7) that the provisions allowing cost orders against persons who encourage others to commence litigation without reasonable prospects of success would apply to volunteer and pro bono lawyers and advisers, and would apply without any cap on the costs that could be ordered and that these provisions may be too broad, with no clear explanation of how the ‘no reasonable prospects of success’ test is to work in practice; and
- (8) that this bill does not include the proposal contained in the Australian Labor Party’s policy ‘Protecting Australia and Protecting the Australian Way’ to establish a Refugee Status Determination Tribunal”.
