Shared custody sounds good and fair. This may be the case for ignorant people who have no idea of the problems it would cause for children. We should be focussing on the Family Court getting it right from the start. Not only my case but so many other cases over the years have gone wrong. How could we be considering shared custody.

Shared custody is out of the question with parents and children who have suffered through domestic violence.

Even in families of genuine caring parents why should children have to keep moving from place to place. We as adults need stability, we can't cope with moving around.

How do you think children would cope? Children especially need stability, consistency in their lives

This is a very cruel arrangement. There are already enough problems for children of separated parents. Let alone give them more problems.

Too many people are against this type of custody arrangement.

If you would like precise details of my story I would be happy to do this.
