Senator Cash asked:

What kinds of measures does the Office take to promote gender equality and ensure it is being considered by all Departments in the process of policy formulation and looking at projects and measures considered by Departments? What form do these measures take? Are they phone calls, letters, in-person consultations or meetings? (Trying to get a feeling for how much advocacy the Office for Women actually does with portfolios, considering that it appears their only stakeholders are government departments)

Answer:

Refer to Question on Notice 56.
