Question

How many non-government approved authorities currently receive total public funding on or above 95 per cent of the schooling resource standard (Commonwealth and State) but receive a Commonwealth funding share that is below 80 per cent of the SRS? Please provide a list of these approved authorities and how much their funding will increase by over the 10 year period.

How many government approved authorities currently receive total public funding on or above 95 per cent of the schooling resource standard (Commonwealth and State) but receive a Commonwealth funding share that is below 20 per cent of the SRS? Please provide a list of these approved authorities and how much their funding will increase by over the 10 year period.

Answer

There are 261 non-government approved authorities estimated in 2017 to receive total public funding on or above 95 per cent of the Schooling Resource Standard (SRS) (Commonwealth and State) but receiving a Commonwealth funding share below 80 per cent of the SRS.

- Table 1 details these approved authorities and how much their per student funding will increase by over the next 10 years.

There are three government approved authorities estimated in 2017 to receive total public funding on or above 95 per cent of the SRS (Commonwealth and State) but receiving a Commonwealth funding share below 20 per cent of the SRS.

- These are WA, Tasmania and the ACT.
- Table 2 details these approved authorities and how much their per student funding will increase by over the next 10 years.

Note:

- These estimates are based on the latest enrolment data reported to the department and assume the same student population applies from 2017 to 2027 to allow for meaningful comparisons.
- These lists assume state and territory governments are contributing funding according to the Australian Education Act 2013.
- Data are sourced using criteria based on the adjusted SRS amount as defined in the Australian Education Amendment Bill 2017.
- Source: departmental modelling.
