QUESTION No.: AI-189

Senator NASH: I have masses of questions I will put on notice, conscious of time. Following up my interjection before about whether there was a breakdown of regional versus metropolitan in the 40 per cent target, I am not looking necessarily for the answer, but I am very interested to know whether there is that breakdown by the ABS. Perhaps one of the very enterprising-looking officials and masses thereof in this room before seven o'clock might be able to dig out whether the ABS actually do that—not the figure but whether or not they do break it down.
