AGENCY/DEPARTMENT: IP AUSTRALIA

TOPIC: Evergreening of pharmaceuticals

REFERENCE: Written Question – Senator Heffernan

QUESTION No.: BI-126

1. How many patents granted by IP Australia relate, concern or are associated with the same kind of medicine (i.e., medicines which are marketed either by the same or related trademark; for example EFEXOR and EFEXOR XR)?
2. In regard to these patents, how many (and identify each and every such patent) are second patents granted over the same kind of medicine?
3. How many patent term extensions have been granted by IP Australia pursuant to s.70 of the Patents Act, 1990?
4. Identify each and every patent which has been the subject of an application for a patent term extension pursuant to s.70 of the Patents Act, 1990?
5. Identify each and every patent which has had its patent term extended pursuant to s.70 of the Patents Act, 1990?
6. In relation to each of the patents identified in 5) what was the period of the patent term extension?
7. What was the financial cost to the PBS of each and every patent term extension?

ANSWER

1 and 2. IP Australia's understanding of these questions is that they relate to instances where more than one pharmaceutical patent involves the same base molecule. This could arise where a later patent involves a new formulation, use or dosage form. To secure a patent, the later application would have to disclose something that was novel, inventive (i.e. not obvious) and of utility. The granting of the later patent would not prevent the expiry of the first patent, after which generic versions of the patented molecule, as encompassed by the first patent, could be marketed by third parties.

It would not be a reasonable use of resources for IP Australia to seek to identify each and every patent in this category. In particular, reviewing applications for related marketing names may not be helpful, since marketing names are not relevant to the patent examination process and might not even have been decided at the time of application. However, all Australian granted patent applications are available on-line at <http://www.ipaustralia.gov.au/auspat/>.

3. IP Australia's publicly available records indicate that, between 30 April 1991 and 14 June 2012, IP Australia granted 619 patent term extensions on applications made pursuant to section 70 of the Patents Act 1990. This includes extensions granted under the former extension of term legislation repealed on 10 January 1995.

4. IP Australia's publicly available records indicate that, between 30 April 1991 and 14 June 2012, the following 721 patents were the subject of an application for an extension of term pursuant to section 70 of the Patents Act 1990. This includes applications filed under the former extension of term legislation repealed on 10 January 1995:

5 and 6. IP Australia's publicly available records indicate that, between 30 April 1991 and 14 June 2012, IP Australia granted the following patent term extensions on applications made pursuant to section 70 of the Patents Act 1990. This includes applications filed under the former extension of term legislation repealed on 10 January 1995. The period of the extension originally granted is indicated in the following table. Where the extension has been subsequently varied or revoked this is noted.
