Written Question on Notice: 11 February 2003

Senator Faulkner asked:

- (a) How many DRO positions are currently vacant or have people acting in the position of DRO? Please provide full details.
- (b) How many DRO positions does the AEC expect will become vacant over the next 12 months because of retirement? Please provide full details.
- (c) How many Divisional offices do the AEC currently have, broken down into stand-alone offices and joint offices? Currently, how many of the joint offices are co-located (working from same office, but separately) and how many are amalgamated (integrated functions)? Please provide details of the relevant Divisions and where the office is situated.
- (d) Does the AEC have a timetable for the proposed amalgamation / colocation of Divisional offices? Please provide full details of any strategic plans.
- (e) What is the maximum number of Divisions the AEC proposes be amalgamated or co-located in any one place?
- (f) What staffing structure does the AEC propose to use for offices covering 2, 3, 4 or 5 Divisions?
- (g) Given DROs are currently at the level of APS6, how will the AEC ensure there are enough qualified people to run future Federal elections? Does the AEC plan to use lower level staff to act as DROs or, alternatively to use a higher-level person as DRO for more than one electorate?
- (h) Given the requirements of Section 32 of the Commonwealth Electoral Act, has the AEC obtained legal advice on whether a person can act as DRO for more than one Division? If so, please provide a copy of that advice.

Additional Estimates Hearings 2002-2003 – 11 February 2003

Answer:

The answer provided to me by the Australian Electoral Commission is as follows:

- (a) There are 150 Divisional Offices with DRO positions. On 11 February 2003, 24 positions were filled by staff on temporary assignment from other duties. Of the 24 positions, 11 of these were actually vacant i.e. there was no usual occupant of the position at that date, because the DRO had resigned, transferred permanently to another role within AEC or retired. The remaining 13 were temporarily vacant, because the usual occupant of the position was on leave or working temporarily in another role within AEC.
- (b) This is difficult to estimate accurately, as we already have a number of staff over 55 years of age and choosing to continue to work, including CSS members who might have been expected to retire at age 55.

15% of AEC's total of 757 ongoing current staff, or 113 people employed by AEC on an ongoing basis, were aged 55 or over at 11 February 2003. Recent attrition rates of staff in this age cohort are provided below.

FY 1998 – 1999 19% of staff age 55 or over FY 1999 – 2000 12% of staff age 55 or over FY 2000 – 2001 4% of staff age 55 or over FY 2001 – 2002 11% of staff age 55 or over

If 10% of this age cohort were to retire over the next 12 months, this would equate to 11 staff. However, the actual number of retirements will depend on the personal circumstances of each employee and cannot be predicted with any certainty.

(c) The AEC currently has 115 stand-alone offices and 35 joint offices. Thirteen of the joint offices are collocated and 1 is amalgamated.

Details regarding the location of the relevant Divisions are contained in Attachment A.

- (d) There is no specific timetable for amalgamations, but no more than seven will occur prior to the next elections. Of these 6 are already collocated. As for collocations, the strategic property plan contains the timetable. See Attachment B.
- (e) The AEC proposes that the maximum number of Divisions that it currently considers will be amalgamated or collocated (in any one place) will be six.
- (f) The AEC is currently consulting with staff in State and Territory offices on creation of enhanced staffing structures, including positions which will:

Additional Estimates Hearings 2002-2003 - 11 February 2003

- enhance career structures for APS 2 and APS3 employees in Divisional Offices for whom direct progression APS3 to APS6 is problematic;
- create a better working environment, by removing the rigid hierarchical 3 person office environment and creating a variety of opportunities for employees across larger functional teams; and
- assist with succession planning and skilling of staff for election periods
- facilitate the delivery of services to meet the particular local needs of the electorates concerned.

The AEC does not have a predetermined structure and a "one size fits all" approach is not appropriate. Divisional Offices have significantly different workloads and communities to service. Local consultation with staff will ensure that the most appropriate structure for each set of Divisions is developed.

No decision will be made on the final structures until consultations have been completed, roles designed and work levels for the new roles assessed against the AEC work level standards.

(g) Planning for a Federal election starts well before the likelihood of an election being announced. Election planning includes workforce planning to assess the likely effects of forthcoming attrition (due to resignation or retirement), skills/knowledge training requirements of ongoing and temporary staff and other factors such as local labour shortages.

To avoid potential shortfalls in experienced and qualified staff, the AEC has a policy of developing staff from within the organisation, including offering development opportunities between election events whenever possible. Internal promotions are supplemented by external recruitment as required. This is not a new experience for the AEC. For the 1998 elections in Victoria, over 40% of DROs had no prior election experience. This arose from redundancy 'package swapping' between AEC staff and staff of other agencies such as the CES and DEETYA. There was no deterioration in the quality of the services provided.

The classification of staff immediately preceding employment as a DRO in either an ongoing or temporary situation has, more often than not, been of a lower or higher classification than APS6. So long as the CEA remains unchanged, there will be a single DRO for each Division for the conduct of the election and depending on work value determinations one would expect, similar classifications.

(h) The AEC does have the advice, but as this is a highly sensitive issue for the Commission at the moment, feels it is inappropriate to release this information publicly, as it would be likely to compromise the Commission's independence at a crucial stage in its management of its responsibilities.
