

It is a basic right that we should be informed of exactly what we are buying. Food labelling, growing and growing in length with numbers for ingredients that hardly a person recognizes, is a deceptive practice that only benefits the retailers.

Furthermore, it is a right that animals, and especially orangutans in this case, should be able to live in their natural environment and not be displaced as it is depleted by mankind (for their own profit). Instead of this the animals are separated from parents, injured and 'lost'.

Particularly, this suffering occurs for the worst reason - because of mankind's greed for profit.

Australia has always been considered a 'free country' with Choices - not any longer.

On all accounts the practice of obtaining, selling and using PALM OIL is unforgivable.

At least the individual needs (and has the right) to be informed and able to make the choice to (silently) participate or not.

Please make this possible by truthfully displaying the PALM OIL content in products.

LYDIA WHYTE