

I'm writing to request that legislation be tabled to make the proper labelling of palm oil mandatory.

Developing countries need to be convinced that:

(a) consumers are aware of practices that are unsustainable in the broadest sense,

(b) that continued pursuit of these practices generates an image to consumers that will be difficult to reverse in the future and

(c) that their indigenous biodiversity in its natural habitat and climate is irreplaceable and will be a substantial source of national income into the future.

Robert Murray
Visiting Research Fellow
School of Earth & Environmental Sciences
The University of Adelaide