

I am writing in support of labelling products containing palm oil. The expansion of palm oil production particularly in Indonesia and scheduled for massive increase in West Papua will have a terrible effect on emissions of green house gases from Indonesia. This is particularly damaging from peat lands converted to palm oil production. Knowing what products contain palm oil enables the consumer to make a choice about supporting this dangerous development on climate change by reducing ones personal use of palm oil and thereby contribute to climate change mitigation. Climate change, the worst environmental problem the human civilisation has faced.

Peter Dart

School of Land, Crop and Food Sciences

The University of Queensland