

Please accept this email as an expression of my support for the Food Standards Amendment (Truth in Labelling – Palm Oil) Bill 2009.

Put simply, as a consumer I should have the right to make informed choices when purchasing food.

I try to make conscious decisions when purchasing food, for both environmental, community and health reasons. I can see no reason why manufacturers would be protected against providing accurate labelling with regards to palm oil content.

As a developed and progressive nation, I would hope that the elected politicians will support this bill and allow consumers to make choices that can ultimately lead to the protection of rainforests, including Orang Utans and other fauna and flora.
