The Committee received a proforma letter from 29 individuals. The text read:

'I write with great concern about the lack of choice Australian women will have in the future for birthing their babies under your proposed Maternity Reforms.

Your proposed birth reforms are going to remove the option of birthing at home with a private registered midwife. It will become illegal for a midwife to attend a birth outside of a hospital unless she has personal indemnity insurance, which midwives do not have and nor do they have any prospect of getting because they are too small in number to warrant an insurance company taking them on, not because they are a high risk for claims (they are not) but because they are too few in number to create a large 'pool' of claim money.

I believe we should be working towards making home birth more accessible to women, not outlawing it. Countless studies from around the world tell us that women birthing at home have a far lower rate of intervention and complications during child birth. I believe that it should be a standard for private health funds to offer cover for home birth and that Medicare should provide rebates for those who choose home birth and prenatal care through a registered midwife. It is discriminatory that right now only the women who can afford it can choose the option of home birth.

More home births would mean utilising the wealth of skill in our midwives currently doing home practice as well as the many who are aspiring to do so. It would also take a load of pressure away from our public health system.

I saw your appearance on 'Insight' many months ago - the episode that looked at midwifery and current birthing models. I came away with a sense of hope that you supported more options for women to choose how they wish to best birth their babies. I am deeply saddened by your change in attitude which kowtows to the current patriarchal model of hospital birthing. Although this option suits some women, it leaves little option for the others who do not have faith in that system and those who see child birth as a natural process, not one that routinely requires a hospital visit.

I feel deeply saddened at the prospect that my own daughter may be denied the opportunity to birth her babies at home if and when the time comes.

I believe that being able to choose the environment in which to birth my babies and also the carers to be present is a deeply personal and basic right.

Please do not take this away.'
