

To Senators on the Senate Select Committee on Climate Policy,

Climate change is the biggest issue facing Australia and the world - we need to take real action, not play around with figures. I want to see things changing - a high-speed rail network linking our major cities, light rail for getting around our cities, strong building regulations so that houses don't need artificial heating and cooling. These things will create jobs and reduce our emissions, the emissions trading scheme will NOT achieve those ends. Let's stop protecting the polluters and instead make Australia a better place to live.
